

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

Children of assorted sizes offer mothers lots of problems. One difficulty is when they come home from school at different hours for their noon meal. You can't be constantly cooking, yet each must have hot appetizing, nourishing, easily-digested food. One answer is chowder and custard-like desserts.

There's a lot to be said for the chowder made with milk. It contains a large amount of nourishment, is easily digested and is not rich enough to produce the heavy feeling that frequently makes afternoon work so trying.

GUIDE TO DESSERT

Serve with the soup toast croutons, or, toasted crackers to supply bulk; radishes and celery for crispness.

When an egg or meat salad is served with a chowder luncheon a simple dessert made without eggs is best—for instance, applesauce and canned or fresh fruit, fruit Betty with hard sauce, fruit tapioca pudding or plain rice pudding.

However, when a plain green salad is planned, rice custard puddings, custard pudding and desserts rich in eggs will fill the bill. This type of dessert actually supplies the food value ordinarily furnished in the main course of a meal.

The composition of the chowder is an important factor in determining the type of salad and dessert. If grated cheese is stirred into the hot soup just before serving the food value is increased. Eggs also increase its food value. If the chowder must stand for some time between servings, it's a good idea to add an egg to each individual portion as it is served.

Corn And Tomato Chowder

Two cups diced potatoes, 1 can corn, 2 cups tomatoes, 1 onion, 4 tablespoons diced salt pork, 4 tablespoons minced parsley, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 1/2 cups milk.

Fry fat slowly from salt pork and sliced onion. Cook slowly until tender but not brown. Add potatoes, corn, tomatoes, pepper, sugar and parsley and 4 cups boiling water. Simmer until potatoes are tender and milk. Serve with toast or toasted crackers.

Date Pecan Pie

One and one-third cups sweetened condensed milk, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup pitca dates, 1-2 cup pecan nut meats, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 unheated eight-inch pie shell.

Chop dates. Beat eggs separately, beating yolks until thick and lemon colored. Combine milk, dates, nuts, vanilla, salt and egg yolks. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff. Turn into unheated pie shell and put into a hot oven (425 degrees F.) for ten minutes. Reduce heat 300 degrees F. and bake half an hour longer. Cool thoroughly before serving.

If you want to serve this pie to quite small children use a Graham cracker crust. This kind of crust is considered more desirable for small children than the usual pie crust.

HOME HINTS

DON'TS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Don't dry clean in the house.

Don't leave the children locked in the house and go visiting.

Don't forget to dry the family toothbrushes in the sun one day a week.

Don't let the family step out of their clothes and leave them on the floor. Insist upon their being hung up.

Don't let the children be wasteful with electricity and leave lights burning all over the house. Teach them to turn them off when leaving a room.

Don't leave half the contents of the food in the tin in which it came. If all is not used, turn the remainder on a china dish and put away in refrigerator to be used later.

THE KITCHEN FLOOR

Since most kitchen floors these days are covered with linoleum this type of covering is due for first consideration. Linoleums are made of a cork, on a cloth foundation and then the whole is waxed or varnished over the top. Because of its porous nature and usually colored patterns, it should be given very special care.

Way To Clean

When a housewife complains because her linoleum wears out in two years of use, provided she has purchased a good grade of linoleum, you can lay the blame for the wearing quite often at the feet of the person who cleans the floor.

Linoleum should be washed in tepid water, never hot, and suds from white soap should be used. After the washing, the floor should be rinsed well, as soap will leave the linoleum streaked and if left on the linoleum will tend to dry out the oil in the finish.

One should be careful not to put too much water on the linoleum floor, as the water will seep through and soak up the seams and tend to rot the burlap on the back.

Scouring powders or harsh water softeners should be ruled out when it comes to washing linoleums. These tend to dry out the linseed oil binder and make the linoleum dry and crumbly, with the result that before long it is unfit for use.

Preserve The Oil

Quite often it is a good idea to add enough sweet milk to the rinsing water to make it a milky color, and the oil in the linoleum will be preserved.

Any number of floor finishers are sold commercially. These are rubbing waxes, waxes that give a gloss but require no rubbing, non-slip, no-rubbing finishes and lacquers and varnishes.

The best way to preserve the linoleum is to lacquer or varnish it first and then apply a coat of wax to protect the finish from scratches. When just varnish or lacquer are used, scratches from sand on shoes and scuffing will cause ugly marks and the whole floor will have to be redone, as the finish cannot be patched up. That is why it is advisable to apply the wax, because the lacquer will do its part to seal the pores.

As for waxes, it might be a good idea for every housewife to take enough time off to go and check up on the various kinds available. There are waxes that require rubbing in, there are others that are a liquid that need merely be applied with a soft cloth and then allowed to dry, and there will reward the worker by brightening the linoleum and giving it a lustre. There are also waxes that clean and wax at the same time, and this last type is especially good for linoleums, since the use of water is not necessary.

DOG BISCUIT

A good substitute for dog biscuits can be made by placing stale bread in the oven until it is as crisp as pulled bread. It can be stored in a tin box and used with the dog's meat and gravy. This will save the expense of buying biscuits.

Identification

See that each purse, billfold, brief case, or slipping bag contains a card bearing the owner's name, address, and telephone number, in case the article should be lost. The majority of people will keep an article if it bears no identification, but will return it if it does.

If the curtains are rather worn, and there is fear that laundering might tear them, place them in a bag and repeat the process. By this method there will be no strain on the material.

Woman Golf Champion Joins Jolly Foursome

The women's U. S. national golf champion, Mrs. Edwin H. Vere, Jr., pictured with (left to right) Teddy Turner, Philadelphia open champion and former New England P. G. A. champion; Gene Sarazen, former open champion, and Louie Fowler, of Boston, on the new links at Pinehurst, N.C., Country Club.

The "Queen Mary" Progresses

September saw the anniversary of the launching of the Cunard White Star liner Queen Mary, and next spring should see her begin her service across the Atlantic. The great vessel has not only provided numbers in the Clydeside area, but has caused the wheels of industry to revolve more quickly throughout the country. Lancashire, for example, has supplied bed linen; Birmingham, a city almost as far from the sea as it is possible to be in England, is supplying a large part of the lighting equipment; while from Yorkshire came oil, to make cores, used in the making of castings for the equipment of various parts of the ship, and so on. It would, indeed, be difficult to find an industrial centre which did not have some share in the building of this ship.

The entire hull and upper decks of the ship are now practically complete, and the many kinds of craftsmen required have begun to carry out the interior decoration and equipment, which will, of course, be on the most lavish and up-to-date lines.

Heavy Increase In Implement Sales

For the 12 months ending September 1935, Canada's imports of farm machinery and implements show a very heavy increase compared with the preceding 12 months. In the 12-month period ending September 30, Canada imported farm implements to the value of $5,454,781 compared with a total of $3,951,112 in the preceding 12 months.

As regards Canada's exports of farm machinery in the 12-month period ending September 30, her exports exceeded imports by a considerable amount. Total exports for the 12 months ending September 30 were $5,724,375.00. In the preceding 12 months our exports were valued at only $2,682,014; so that in the year the export business of Canadian implement factories increased by over 100 per cent.

In the 12-month period ending September 30 last, Canada imported 450 Diesel engines, 953 harvesters, plows valued at $58,847.00, 16 threshers and 2,189 tractors for farm use. Tractors as imported during the year were valued at $1,802,903.00 and parts for tractors in general use, $1,489,138.00. Other imports in the above period included 277,041 cwt. of binder twine valued at $1,675,943.00 and so 3,578 washing machines and 5,299 pumps.

Women May Serve On Australian Juries

Before the year closes women might be acting as jurors in Australia and also sitting on the bench. The Minister of Justice of New South Wales, L. O. Martin, has promised to introduce a bill to give women that privilege.

They would not be presiding magistrates, but act as assessors to industrial courts. They would be permitted to express to the presiding magistrate, with becoming brevity, it is hoped, their opinions on the cases.

The desire to do this has long held a place in the thoughts of women who are active in public affairs, and they are bent upon translating ambition into fact. The Children's Court is their first objective. They claim that they are better qualified to deal with young children than the ordinary magistrate. The Children's Court, aged 18 years, as well as with vocates admit that a man is better able to deal with some older juvenile offenders than a woman.

They argue, however, that a woman's presence, coupled with a word in season to the man presiding, might be beneficial. Past and present magistrates do not all agree with that opinion. There are women justices of the peace, of course, in Sydney. It is said in quarters most familiar with the working of the courts that they never will.

"I'd far rather play a secondary part in a good play than a star part in an inferior play."—Richard Bennett.

"Pass it over!" called Smith hastily, with the assumed eagerness of a slave to the drug. He put the pipe to his lips, while Shen Yan prepared another for me.

"What do you do, don't inhale any, Patriot!" he warned.

"We pretended to smoke, and taking my cue from Smith I allowed my head gradually to sink lower and lower, until, within a few minutes, I sprawled sideways on the floor, Smith close by me.

I tell you, my fellow-Christians, your love has a broken wing, if it cannot fly across the ocean. Christ said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." —Babcock.

Human-Interest Story

This is a simple little human-interest story, a true story of a man who was down but not out, whose head was "bloody but unbowed" in "the fell clutch of circumstance" who has emerged triumphant from the night that covered him.

Two or three years ago this man drifted into The Ottawa Journal office. He was shabby and penniless, and because there was no alternative he was living at the Union Mission, doing such odd jobs as offered. He was well educated, had been trained in one of the professions, had held good jobs before the depression broke in upon his career. He wanted advice—and work—but no favors.

This man did not whine and grumble. He did not complain about his hard luck, did not blame anybody. He would have felt much more at home in the Chateau Laurier than in the Mission, but he accepted the Mission's hospitality with gratitude and in fact wrote for this page a couple of articles about that institution which some readers will recall. He was deeply interested in his fellow-unfortunates, the obvious perils of their nomadic life, but he saw that in an extraordinary emergency the State had not failed in its duty.

Presently the man drifted away. There were no farewells—his calls ceased, and that was all. Months passed with no word of him, and now comes a letter from a little mining town in Northern Ontario. He was at work, in his profession, was happy and contented, doing something useful, something that gave him support—in prospects.

Chic Home Frock

2670

Fashioned like the good looking sport model with "little boy" collar for which you've always envied your brother. The useful shirred pocket adds touch of femininity.

Dark ground cottons, tweedy and linen-like weave cottons, of sports influence, are especially lovely for this simple to sew dress.

Style No. 2670 is designed for 42 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3/4 yard of 39-inch material with and 3 1/2 yards of contrasting HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size in stamps or coin (coin preferred); wrap it carefully and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide Street, Toronto.

Generals

Soviet Russia is to try to get along without the word signifying "general" while restoring a military hierarchy as essential to the discipline of an army system. The word came originally from the church militant, but carries, presumably the most martial sound of all titles. A great many stories have been told about American colonels, but there are "generals" from her early visit to America. "Our American fellow-passengers," she wrote had a curious way of giving everyone military rank (this was in the early 1870's). There was an old mining engineer from Bradford on board who, when we started from Liverpool, was plain Mr. Snowden. By the time we got to New York he was "Captain" Snowden, and when we met him a fortnight later in Utah he had become "General" Snowden. An exaggerated appreciation of the different grades of military rank is not uncommon in America. I remember a certain general coming over here in 1870 from New York with letters of introduction who, on being asked to what branch of the military profession he belonged, answered: "Well, sir, in my country, I am receiver-general, but when I come to England I drop the receiver."

But the great place for generals has been Haiti. Hesketh Pritchards summed up the matter by writing that "Haiti is governed by generals in all sizes. The general is so ubiquitous that it leads you to doubt whether it may not be possible that while to be a general is no compliment, not to be one is in the nature of a slap in the face." He declared that he had been able to find no exact statistics later than 1907, but that there were then in Haiti 6,500 generals of division, 7,900 regimental officers, and 6,500 privates.

New York Woman Can Feed Herself on $2.25 a Week

It is possible for a woman in New York city to keep well nourished and healthy on a food allowance of $2.25 a week, it was declared by the New York Association for Improving the Conditions of the Poor, according to the Herald Tribune.

It was said at the headquarters of the association that its nutrition bureau has instructed hundreds of persons in the art of preparing nourishing and attractive meals to cost from 32 to 40 cents daily. Although men are eligible to receive minimum-cost food instruction as well as women, Miss Lucy H. Gillett, head of the nutrition bureau, said that so far fewer than a dozen had appeared for lessons.

Bailey B. Burrill, general director of the association, pointed out that thousands of persons on relief, or having jobs paying low wages, face health impairment here because of malnutrition. Instruction in marketing and cooking, he said, would enable them to prepare their food at home at a weekly cost of from $2.25 to $2.50.

"While the meals are not equal in quality to those served at first-class hotels," said Mr. Burrill, "the menus possible on this limited budget have ample variety and the food is sufficient to maintain health. Girls agree that the food they prepare themselves is better than it is possible for little money to buy in restaurants for so little money."

"All our tips have not been a client who isn't looking. The lucky ones are those who to sell out, and know what to lost. The next thing will be the plaintiffs. They forget the money made on our advice; they remember what we helped them lose."

"But how has the panic from New York to London asked.

"It's simple," her friend exclaimed. "The gamblers over there realise what they can and when they can. The whole world will sell there and no buyers, go tumbling down; and the profit that follow our advice blame it to Milton Medlicott."

"It's rather awful," Eve said.

"Do thankful you've got off with that mining venture," said. "We are in for it when this selling rush is over, we can see some of us worrying our jobs."

"And why shouldn't that be the case?" Eve asked.

"Medlicott has gone too far that venture to stop," Frankie said. "I expect now the market dust. When legitimate speculators, people are more likely to be a flier in those wildcat risks."

"Please don't talk as if it were swindle, Frankie," Eve said coolly. "Right!" the tall girl agreed. "Heaven knows we do with a winner now. If ever expect you'll hear all about it the chief."

Ad so it proved, Medlicott came Eve's room with a graver face. He was accustomed to wear, and ed up a chair with the air of one had serious matters to discuss.

"You know the share market broken, Eve," he began. "It's a business for everybody, but I help us to find some capital for Dandong Mine."

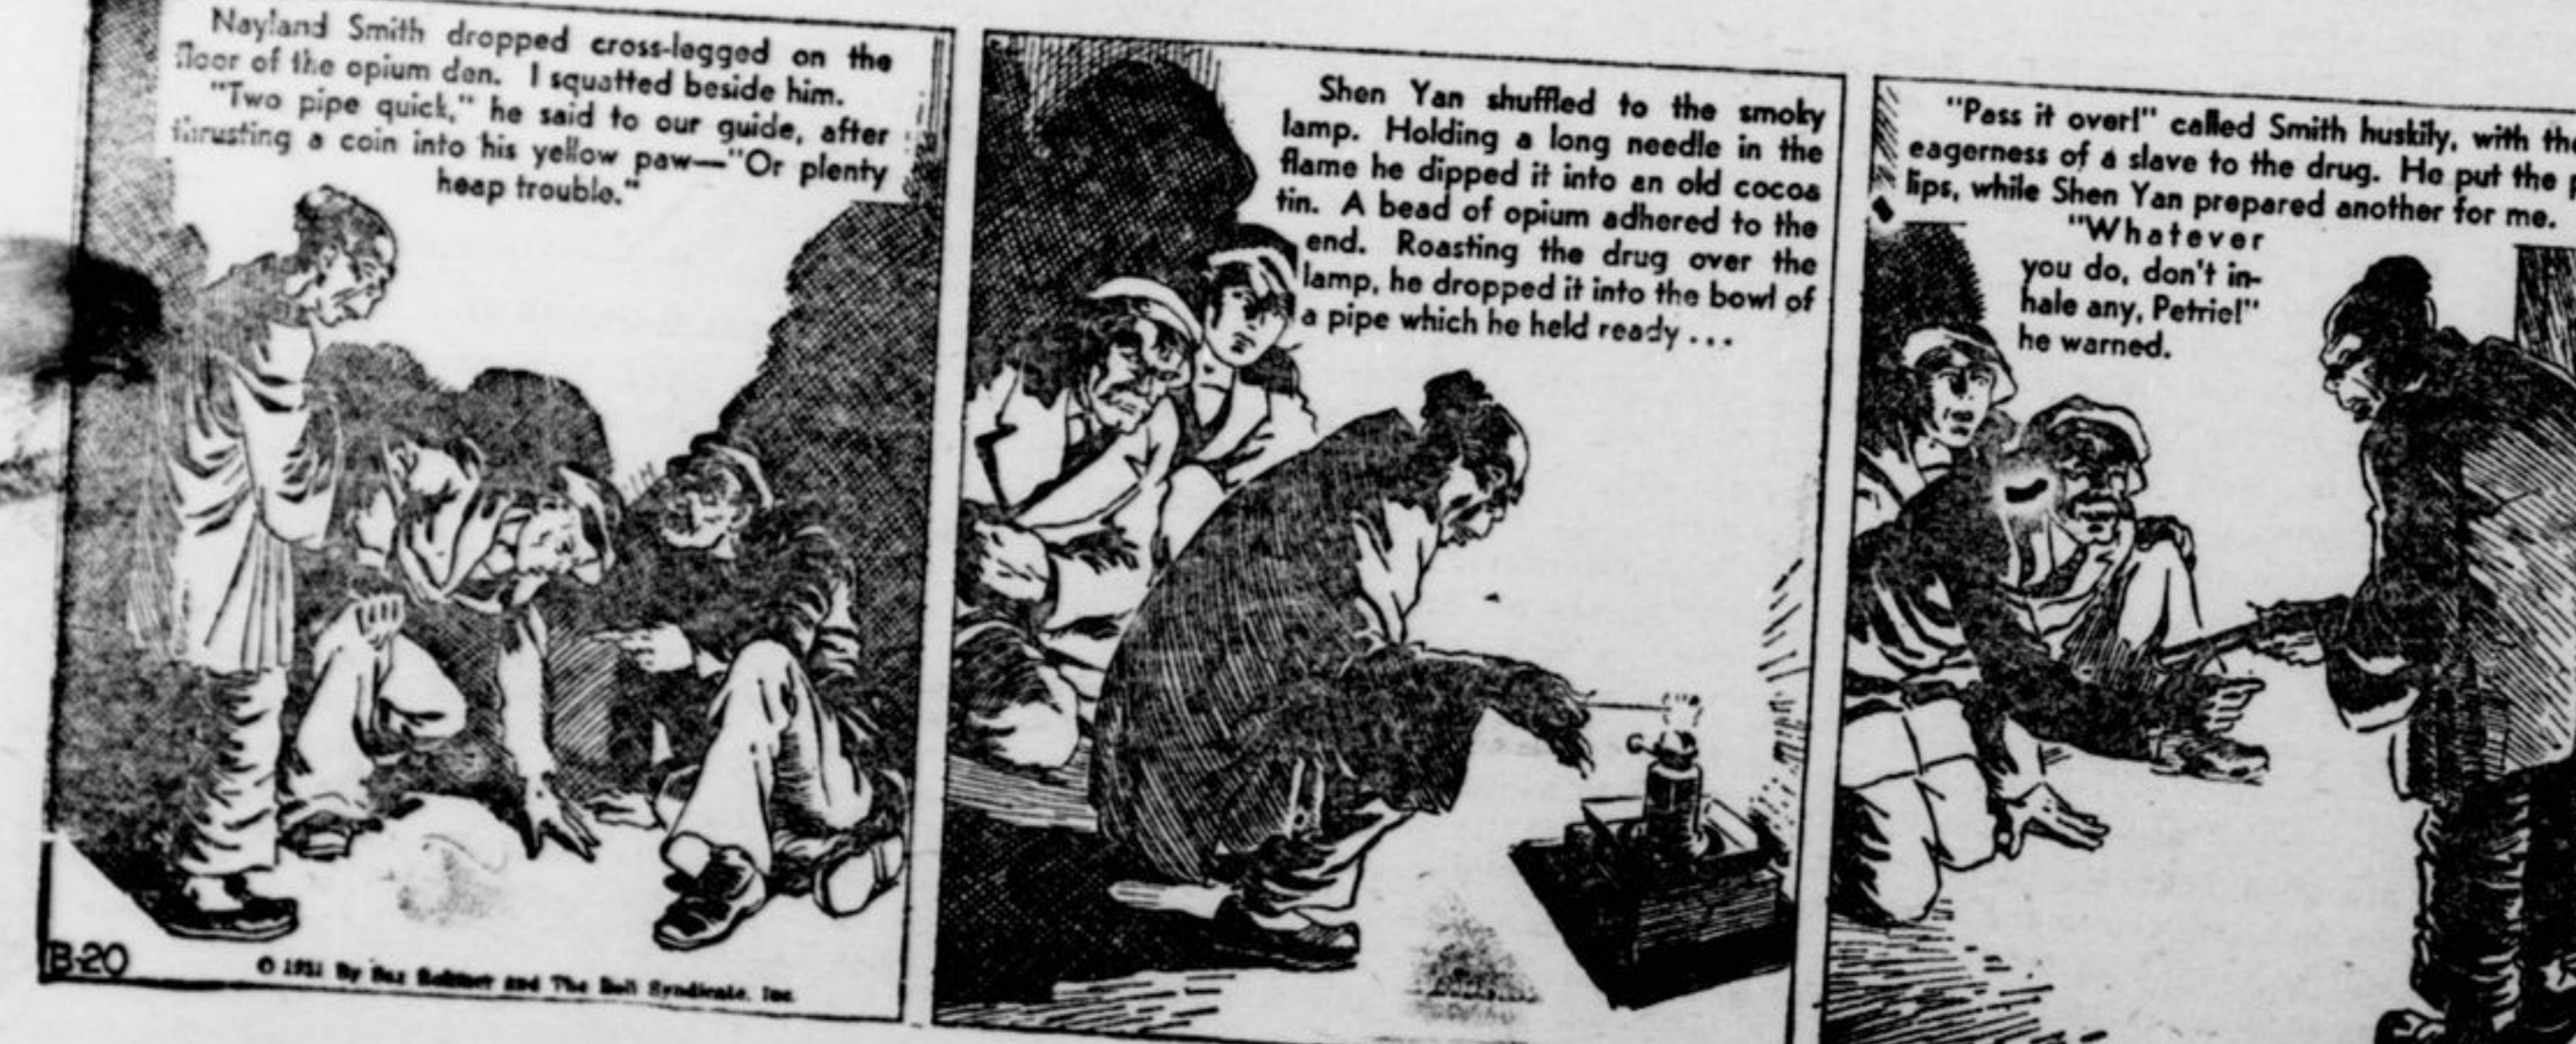

"I'm afraid I don't quite see it," Eve replied.

"Well, all our clients are lost and many of them are bad losers course. If they don't win always game is not fair. But we have speculators who take a more sport view of it. Show them how they get their money back on an outside chance and they'll have a stab at it."

"You speak as though the mine were a sort of dream."

"I speak as mine out of every man in the City would speak" M

THE SEVERED FINGERS—Pipes For Two.

Mayland Smith dropped cross-legged on the floor of the opium den. "Two pipe quick," he said to our guide, after thrusting a coin into his yellow paw—"Or plenty heap trouble."

Shen Yan shuffled to the smoky lamp. Holding a long needle in the flame he dipped it into an old cocoon fin. A bead of opium adhered to the end. Roasting the drug over the lamp, he dropped it into the bowl of a pipe which he held ready . . .

"Pass it over!" called Smith hastily, with the assumed eagerness of a slave to the drug. He put the pipe to his lips, while Shen Yan prepared another for me.

"What do you do, don't inhale any, Patriot!" he warned.

"I'd far rather play a secondary part in a good play than a star part in an inferior play."—Richard Bennett.

"We pretended to smoke, and taking my cue from Smith I allowed my head gradually to sink lower and lower, until, within a few minutes, I sprawled sideways on the floor, Smith close by me.

"Pass it over!" called Smith hastily, with the assumed eagerness of a slave to the drug. He put the pipe to his lips, while Shen Yan prepared another for me.

"What do you do, don't inhale any, Patriot!" he warned.

"I'd far rather play a secondary part in a good play than a star part in an inferior play."—Richard Bennett.

"We pretended to smoke, and taking my cue from Smith I allowed my head gradually to sink lower and lower, until, within a few minutes, I sprawled sideways on the floor, Smith close by me.

Rain

Dan Prescott and Gene Westley find gold in the arid south. They stake their claims in England, but a long journey to the Westley has a fiancée in Sydney he married. Gordon forwards a photo of his fiancée in London and when Dan sees her he is Gordon. Dan's typical chatter work in mine, the broker who mines.

"Promises that not a word to Medlicott," Dan said. "You may be all wrong, and open to be right in any further."

"What you say shall go of course."

"Well, somebody made by airplane, and swooped best that end and we again. Glad reports that in New Zealand, the which started morning."

"And you think?"

"He got me out of the went on. "He played that my photo; I wondered why he was so keen in a picture taken. I'm tied up he was the only other man just where to go for that do you think yourself. My"

"It sounds very foolish. What do you intend to do? You got me clear of this Dan said. "Once I know that are free, I'll attend to Westley."

"On that very day, in New York, the over-riding market collapsed, and the financial panic which in the Stock Exchange of the crisis developed with discussions and speed of an and by the middle of the hundreds of thousands of speculators are ruined."

"There was an epidemic sales of shares and securities involved all dabblers in speculation. No country escaped. London was first to suffer. In effect of the panic was so lively, the only department involved was that with which christ had made acquaintance were not winners to congratulate down with chagrin, and "ings" was disbanded, for the staff being turned out, the resignation of quite another response of quite another loss."

"All our tips have not been a client who isn't looking. The lucky ones are those who to sell out, and know what to lost. The next thing will be the plaintiffs. They forget the money made on our advice; they remember what we helped them lose."

"But how has the panic from New York to London asked.

"It's simple," her friend exclaimed. "The gamblers over there realise what they can and when they can. The whole world will sell there and no buyers, go tumbling down; and the profit that follow our advice blame it to Milton Medlicott."

"It's rather awful," Eve said.

"Do thankful you've got off with that mining venture," said. "We are in for it when this selling rush is over, we can see some of us worrying our jobs."

"And why shouldn't that be the case?" Eve asked.

"Medlicott has gone too far that venture to stop," Frankie said. "I expect now the market dust. When legitimate speculators, people are more likely to be a flier in those wildcat risks."

"Please don't talk as if it were swindle, Frankie," Eve said coolly. "Right!" the tall girl agreed. "Heaven knows we do with a winner now. If ever expect you'll hear all about it the chief."

Ad so it proved, Medlicott came Eve's room with a graver face. He was accustomed to wear, and ed up a chair with the air of one had serious matters to discuss.

"You know the share market broken, Eve," he began. "It's a business for everybody, but I help us to find some capital for Dandong Mine."

"I'm afraid I don't quite see it," Eve replied.

"Well, all our clients are lost and many of them are bad losers course. If they don't win always game is not fair. But we have speculators who take a more sport view of it. Show them how they get their money back on an outside chance and they'll have a stab at it."

"You speak as though the mine were a sort of dream."

"I speak as mine out of every man in the City would speak" M