Choice butcher cattle brought from 5.00 to 5.25, fair to good from 4.25 to 4.75, common and medium 3.50 to $4. Baby heaves sold fully a half lower, choice from 6.50 to 7.00, others downward to $5.

The cow trade was active at reduced prices; choice fat cows from 3.25 to 3.50, with a few extra choice for kosher purposes up to 4.00. Choice milk cows and springers sold at from $50 to $60. The bull trade is easier, choice selling at 4.00, bolognas at 3.75.
The lamb market has held active and steady, choice feed-lot lambs selling at 8.75, others of medium quality from 7.50 to 8.50. Choice light sheep sold at from $5 to $6. The calf trade is fully a dollar lower, choice veal selling at from 8.00 to 8.50, fair to good from 7.00 to 8.00, common and medium 5.50 to 6.50. All other markets have reacted and lower prices are in effect elsewhere.
Supplies of hogs were heavy over the week-end, causing a slow market and consequent lower prices. Monday's sales were about a quarter lower and today, the market is closing at 8.35 for truck deliveries.

The Durham Review

GROWING OLD WITH THE CENTURY
A raw March wind blew in around the humble home of Peter Ramage in Abbey Mains, Haddingtonshire, Scotland on March 8, 1849. It was an epoch-mark day in that far-gone year, for a son was born to the head of the household, and eighty-seven years hence, the son—Charles Ramage—is relating the event. Not that the son was the offspring of a dynasty or the son of aristocrats, is he now writing this article. Rather, Charles Ramage came of humble peasant stock, but had parents of rugged honesty and worth. Of this fact, we are very proud. The little "ben" wherein we were born, was one of a row of similar cottages in Abbey Mains, about four miles out from the town of Haddington and 17 miles from Edinburgh. Here for eighteen years we spent a happy youth, with our brother William, now of Priceville, and sister Mary. The death of the latter, and only sister, at twelve years of age, was a heartbreak to my parents. At the age of fourteen, I was apprenticed to be chore boy and an all-round 'devil' to Jos. McNeil, in Haddington, who carried on a job printing office, as well as a book exchange bureau. Here we learned the secrets of the printer's case and what the terms "pi", "pica" and "em quad", etc., meant.
For over four years we traversed these four miles night and morning to McNeil's office and on reaching there started the fires for the day. The training and advice received in this little print and book shop stayed with us all our days, though when the Ramage family emigrated to America, we little thought that sixty-nine years later we would be writing this experience.
Once only, were we privileged to return to our home town and birthplace. That was in 1910, along with our wife. But we left off the returning too long to have any friends in Scotland remember us by our first name. Our son while on a furlough, during the Great War period, also visited our early home and at that period, he faced the lady occupant of our one-time home, (who was as big as the national debt he said) with the request to see the inside of the cottage where his father was born. She was most hospitable and kind in conducting him around.
As we previously said, this book and print shop, was where ye Editor got his love and penchant for reading. In the later 50's and 60's of his last century, books were not in every corner as they are today, and a book was a book. Here the romantic tales of Sir Walter Scott had their first reading and the wonderful stories of Charles Dickens. Much of our reading was done en route to and from the office and the daily paper of that day was an unknown visitor to our humble home.
The simple, regular and consistent life in which our early years were cast, could not help but have an influence in our later years, and today, at eighty-seven years of age, we bear tribute to the fact that we come from a goodly heritage.
Yes, Sunday, March 8th, was our 87th birthday and while the best part of our life has been in Canada, we like to think of our formative years in Scotland with our parents, and that the simple, daily round of duties, all a part in shaping our future life, humble as it has been. Our life in Canada is another story of which we have told previously.

at Queen's Park

By The Watchman
Toronto, March 12th. Out of the maze of figures and facts presented to the Legislature by Attorney General Arthur Roebuck in his five-hour Hydro speech, there emerged the definite statement that under the new contracts made with the Quebec power companies, the power users of Ontario will save in the Niagara system alone a sum close to $30,000,000 during the next four years. This is in comparison with what the province would have had to pay if the old contracts had not been cancelled.
To the man in the street whose knowledge of Hydro is limited, the data presented to the House by both Mr. Roebuck and Col. W. H. Price, former Attorney General, is scarcely understandable. Engineers can no doubt appreciate the arguments made but Mr and Mrs Citizen are concerned only when it touches their pocket book. If the Attorney General had left everything out of his speech except the figures relating to future savings, it would have been all that was necessary to clinch his arguments.
Col. Price veteran member for Parkdale riding and a contestant for the Conservative party leadership, did not contradict the statement of the Attorney General that tremendous savings would result. But he suggested in no uncertain terms that a power shortage would eventually result from the policy of the government. He supported this contention by a well-drawn argument which, however was attacked by Mr Roebuck on several major points.
It is generally admitted that a power shortage is not outside the realm of possibility unless additional sources of electrical energy are developed. Mr. Roebuck, in the course of his address, hinted that the Hydro Commission and the government were not mindful of the fact that many thousands of additional horsepower could be developed at Niagara.
One feature of the new Gatheneau contract is that the Hydro Commission takes power as and when it is needed. There will be no costly surplus piling up at the rate of $15 per horsepower. This in itself is recognized as a distinct advantage over the terms of the cancelled agreement. There are many other concessions in the new contracts, both for Niagara and Eastern Ontario, which were not included in the cancelled ones. The government has driven a good bargain and only the future can tell whether their estimate of power needs in Ontario is correct.
One significant statement was made by the Attorney General during his Hydro address. He voiced the government's opposition to spending $62,000,000 on the initial stage of the St. Lawrence waterways development at a time when there was no use for additional power. Premier Hepburn said that he did not think there would be any use for St. Lawrence power during the present decade.
But there was no objection to the ironing out of the difficulties standing in the way of the joint international development.
With conditions as they are it would be reckless and imprudent to spend this huge amount for something which could not be utilized for many years, it is argued by the government. Ontario has a sufficient supply of power contracted for to meet the needs of industry, keeping in mind, too, the natural growth of individual demands for energy.

EDGE HILL

The Junior Farmers and Junior Institute held their monthly meeting on Friday night. The girls discussed the home garden. Miss Mary Anderson gave a paper on 60 years of progress. Misses Dorothy Ritchie and Margaret Firth gave hints on interior decorating.
The Jr. Farmers meeting was well attended. Roll call was answered by an Irish joke. Allie McGillivray gave an interesting paper on "Shearing, dipping and dressing sheep". Three boys were appointed to canvass the neighborhood to get members for a football club next year.
The most important item on the joint program was a debate "Resolved that preparation for war was a guarantee of peace". The affirmative side was upheld by Miss Margaret Edge and David Aljoe; negative side by Miss Clara Jack and Chas. Robson. The judges, Miss Margaret Firth, Gordon Riddell and Dan Ritchie, gave the decision to the negative side. Both sides had spent considerable thought and time on preparing the debate. The Staples orchestra supplied lively music.

Is Einstein Wrong?
A SIMPLE little thing," declared Prof. W. B. Cartmel, of the University of Montreal, sitting in the book-strewn study of his Westmount home where, for some months past, since his retirement from the Northern Electric Company, as mathematical expert, he has worked out the highly complicated mathematical formulas by which he attempts to disprove the Einstein theory of the non-existence of ether and the constant speed of light.
Addressing the American Physical Society in New York recently, he took his audience by surprise when he showed them that the slight difference observed between the velocity of light in the two beams reflected upon the interferometer in the original experiment many years ago was not an error as Einstein maintains, but was just what should be expected, and indicates an "ether drift" which proves Newton's third law correct and logical. "In any case," says the genial professor, who twinkles in his eyes, "they have got to show me a better proof than they have yet brought."

LIFE'S CANVAS

Sunshine and shadow and laughter and tears,
These are forever the paints of the years,
Splashed on the canvas of life day by day;
We are the artists, the colors are they,
We are the painters, the pigments we use
We're never wholly permitted to choose.
Grief with its grey tint and joy with its red
Come from life's tubes to be blended and spread.
Let me, when trouble is mine to portray,
Dip, with good courage, my brush in the grey;
After the tears and the grief let there be
Something of faith for all who may see.
Lord, let me paint not in anger or hate,
Grant me the patience to work and to wait;
Make me an artist though humble my style,
And let life's canvas show—
Life lived worth while.

ON FOUR COMMITTEES

Miss Agnes Macphail M. P., has been appointed to four of the standing committees for this session of the Dominion Parliament as follows: Miscellaneous and Private Bills, Agriculture and Colonization, Industrial and International Relations, and the Library. Miss Macphail will have plenty to do to fill in her time at Ottawa in attending the regular sessions and her committee work.

Mr. Ben Coutts has recently purchased a radio.
The U.F.W.O. held their March meeting at the home of Mrs. Grace Wise with a good attendance. Minutes of January and February meetings were read and adopted. Literature was read by secretary from head office. Roll call was heartily responded to by an Irish joke. An interesting program followed consisting of community singing, readings by Mrs. McCulloch and Mrs. Alf. Bailey; contests by Miss Grace Reay, Mrs. George Turnbull and Mrs. Wilfred Alexander. As this was an Irish meeting a little extra lunch was served, consisting of potatoes and salads sandwiches and cake. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Aylmer Reay. A letter of thanks for fruit sent when sick was read from Islay Brown and also a letter of appreciation from the MacArthur family who have moved to the Rocky.

TELLS HOW TO BEAUTIFY HOME SURROUNDINGS

It is generally accepted that the home is the first and best place to practice charity so the home should be the first centre of beauty and no better start can be made in this direction than by beautifying the home grounds. For those who have a desire to make their home surroundings a joy to themselves and all who see them the booklet "Beautifying the Home Grounds of Canada" will prove a helpful and encouraging document. A limited number of this publication is available from the Canadian Horticultural Council, 114 Victoria Street, Ottawa, for the nominal price of 25 cents. It has chapters on landscape architecture, how to make the lawn, the flower garden, furniture, pools, rock gardens, the kind of shrubs, plants, trees, that can be grown in the different parts of the Dominion, with plans and illustrations. The time of the year is rapidly approaching when the noblest of pursuits—gardening, will be in full swing.
