SOMEBODY TO SEE YOU

IF EVERYBODY with something to interest you should come and ring your bell, what a nuisance it would be! Think of the swarming, jostling crowd, the stamping of feet on your porch and carpets!

Every week we know of many callers who come to see you. They never jangle the bell—they don't take up your whole day trying to get your attention. Instead, they do it in a way that is most considerate of your privacy and your convenience. They advertise in your newspaper!

In this way you have only to listen to those you know at a glance have something that interests you. They make it short, too, so you can gather quickly just what you want to know. You can receive and hear them all without noise or confusion in a very few minutes.

In fairness to yourself look over all the advertisements. The smallest and the largest—you never can be sure which one will tell something you really want to know.

BACKING DURHAM FOR A CHAMPIONSHIP

Before the 'Review' reaches all our readers, Durham Hockey boys will be Ontario's champion team in Int. B., or we are sadly out.

It is gratifying to see the sporting interest adjacent towns with hockey teams, have for Durham team, in their stepping into finals. Dick Payne, Sports Editor, of the Sun-Times, Owen Sound, has given considerable space and support to Durham's champion team, and even if his surmises in previous games have proven him a jinx in prophesying correctly, it was with good-natured sportsmanship he took the results. It is but coming to Durham hockey team to get in the limelight in hockey prowess. Year in and year out they have consistently played good hockey and the citizens are proud of them.

THE IDEAL LIBRARIAN

Seeing that Durham has a new lady librarian, the following article from a recent issue of the Ontario Library Review is quite timely:

It is taken for granted that a librarian should be courteous and intelligent, accurate and possessed of professional knowledge; that she should have a well rounded general education and have specialized literature. It is also generally felt that she should not only love books but love them so much that she will want others to know and love them too.

She should be attractive in appearance and possess good taste in dress. Some of this attractiveness will be due to her good health of which she should have abundance. She should also have enough common sense to conserve it.

While realizing the importance of her work of bringing the right book to the right reader she should always lead rather than drive, and should frequently acknowledge, at least to herself, that there may be a great difference in opinions and both of them fairly correct, as to what the right book is at that particular time.

A librarian without a sense of humor is a tragedy both to herself and the public. There are so many situations that are delightfully funny, the memory of which takes away the gall of the unhappy incidents, that one should consider the ability to laugh as an essential in a librarian. Sometimes she can smooth over a most unpleasant situation with a patron by a laugh with her, and fortunate is she when she can see her own stupidities as well as those of her readers and chuckle over them to her own edification.

Quite an ideal young librarian have we by now, but even so, the one most essential qualification has not been yet named; without it all the other virtues are as tinkling brass; namely, a love of people, and a great sympathy with and undertaking of their characteristics, their motives and actions and a realization that humans are very much alike under the skin. The problem is to get in deep enough and then partly to know why they are as they are. The librarian is in a position to do her little bit through the library to make them happier and more efficient.

Such a lover of people believes that there is no beauty in an unoccupied library building; that books without readers are of no avail; that catalogues and call numbers are only means to an end; and that the most perfect charging system in the world becomes a curse if it makes membership numbers more important than people, and circulation records more essential than happy and satisfied readers.

The lone assistant or the librarian at the information desk is generally expected to be an understanding person. Is it not equally essential that the chief executive be such also, and the cataloguer and reference librarian as well, for each one in turn should be working towards solving the same problem of the reading needs of their public? People! People! People! should be the first thought of all. The ideal librarian never gets away from them and their problems, and will sacrifice routine every time, if necessary, for the sake of personal contacts.

Of course the librarian's first care should be for the serious student who comes for help in some definite problem, but the ideal librarian will be very cautious in deciding arbitrarily that this person's needs are more important than that one's, or that one subject is more vital than another. She will not want her readers to atrophy mentally, but she will realize that there are times when an opiate may be the only thing that will do them any good and the lover of people will be very tolerant in this day and generation, of the person who wants to read to forget.

Legislature Carries Budget Motion

F. R. OLIVER'S WEEKLY LETTER

Toronto, March 30: On Friday of last week the Provincial Legislature finished the long drawn budget debate, the Government securing a majority of 43, the vote being 69 to 16.

The feeling is growing in the House that there must be a limitation on the length of a speech a member may make. In the course of the Budget debate which lasted almost three weeks, many exceedingly long speeches were made. I am thinking particularly of three—M. M. McBride, Liberal, Brantford, spoke almost three hours; Mr. T. A. Kidd, Conservative, Kingston, spoke two and a half hours; and Mr. Elgie, Conservative, Woodbine, two hours. These speeches would have been better from every conceivable angle had they been shortened to an hour or even forty minutes, as is the rule in the Dominion House.

Lawyers are of course the worst offenders. They clothe their argument with so many flowery, yet meaningless phrases, and talk so much beside the issue, that the point they seek to make is obscured by the verbal foliage that they throw about it. I cannot help but feel that a strict enforcement of a forty-minute speaking rule would expediate the business of the House, would make for clarity of debate and would give more members an opportunity to participate in the discussion.

The two main speeches last week were those of Mr. Henry and Mr. Hepburn in winding up the debate on Friday last. Mr. Henry, whose tenure of office as Conservative leader is of a very precarious nature, made a rather ordinary speech; only one point stands out in his address, namely this argument that the huge debt we carry in this Province is a sign of ambition and of a desire to forge ahead. He quoted that old theory: "If a man isn't in debt he doesn't make money".

The Premier followed Mr. Henry and in a seventy-minute speech convinced his followers that his health was at least partially restored, he showed no signs of fatigue at the completion of his address as had been the case on former occasions, and his supporters are hoping that his mooted retirement has been pushed still farther into the background. The Premier made a vicious attack on Honorable W. H. Price, who had previously criticised the administration of the Liquor Control Act. He quoted Mr. Price's own words on the eve of the last Provincial election, to the effect that if the Conservative Government was returned beer licenses would be given to restaurants and that some of the restrictions would be removed. The Premier said this would be going a good deal farther than this Government has gone. The Premier covered a variety of subjects, there are only a few of these with which I wish to deal. He told the House that lawyers' fees must be pruned, and that his Government was not going to be a lawyer's paradise. No statement made by the Premier brought more applause than the one just mentioned, for we know that in the past, lawyers on Government work were possessed of a feeling that they could write their own figure. That the Premier means what he says in this regard, his followers have little doubt, for they recall at least two instances where the Premier has refused to accept a lawyer's tendered bill.

Recently when the Opposition were questioning the amounts paid to L. Duncan, K. C., re Hydro Contracts, the Premier quite definitely said Lewis Duncan's tendered bill would not be paid; and then Norman Newton K. C., for work in respect to Toronto Police Probe, tendered a bill of some seven or eight thousand dollars, and this was drastically cut. I am sure we all agree that exorbitant fees charged by lawyers should have the red pencil run through them. The Premier declared his Government against special privilege, made no apology for Income Tax. At the conclusion of the Premier's speech the House divided on Party Lines, with Sam Lawrence, C.C.F., Hamilton and myself voting with the Government and for the Budget.

The hope is that we will conclude by Easter but we still have forty-nine bills on the order paper, and at least some of them contentious. All the estimates are still to be voted and the government attitude, whatever it may be on the Separate School question, is certain to start a long debate. However, after ten Sessions in the Legislature, I think we will finish by Easter. It is surprising the amount of work that can be done in a short time, with Easter and the finish of the Session in sight.

CRAWFORD

This community received quite a shock last week when it was learned that Mrs. Archie Brown had passed away in Owen Sound where she had resided for some years. Mrs. Brown was very well known here, having spent the greater part of her life in this neighborhood and was loved and respected by all who knew her. She was always helpful and a good friend to all with whom she came into contact. Our most sincere sympathy is extended to all the friends and relatives and especially to her two sons J.D. and Alexander. Sympathy is also extended to J. D. and Mrs. Brown in the loss of their infant daughter Catherine Ann, aged four months, who passed away last Saturday and was laid beside her grandparents in Rocky Saugeen cemetery on Monday afternoon.

The Crawford Louise W.I. met at the home of Mrs Wilfred Wright last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. W. Anderson presided and read Hebrews 2nd chapter, for the scripture. The roll call Canadian industry and where it is carried on, was well responded to, and several good Irish jokes were told. A paper "how to decorate a girl's bedroom for five dollars" was prepared by Mrs Henry Weirnier, and it contained many bright ideas and suggestions. Mrs D. J. Macdonald sang "Where the River Shannon flows", and Miss Mildred Henderson gave a reading on the life of St. Patrick, and also read a chapter from the History of Grey County. Alma Anderson and Florence McDonald gave a brief outline of the short course recently held in Elmwood. Current events were given by Mrs D. J. Macdonald and Florence Macdonald contributed a piano solo, "Rock of Ages." After close of the meeting, a social time was spent together during which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess.
