FINIS

"Finis" is written at the close of the last chapter of the senior editor of this paper. His book of life has been a very complete one and full of interesting matter. To appreciate his book to the fullest extent, it was necessary to know the man. The personality of the late editor was strong and virile and something that remains fragrant as the rose.

His book of life covers a wide span of time, both in world and local history, and the chapters therein show up the many versatile activities of the author. While a lover of his home and family life, his abilities marked him for civic responsibilities and the obligations undertaken, he did not shrink. He was a sworn enemy to everything that savored of sham and hypocrisy and a lover of that which was upright and honorable. Charles Ramage had a temperament that carried him through many battles and while he could not have his opinions always carried out, they were always respected. The Biblical words "Better is he that controlleth his speech than he that taketh a city", was true in his case, and many are the testimonies today that it meant more than mere words to him.

But in his home does the full blow of the passing fall. Here he lived his life and the frailty rise to call him blessed. On a recent birthday, a wall plaque was sent him by a member of his family, which sums up better than anything we can say, regarding his attributes, and with this we close:

FATHER

A rock of strength to lean upon in time of joy or stress;
An understanding, loyal soul,
A heart of tenderness,
A mind all wisdom, knowing how
justice and love to blend;
A teacher, loving, patient, kind,
My Father and my friend.

THE VACANT CHAIR

The "Review" family have been particularly fortunate in the past in escaping bereavement in the home. For over forty years it has been a united family, happy in the successes and sympathy in any misfortune in the family circle. Thus when Death steps in and the husband and father is removed from us the gap is keenly felt. Readers will kindly overlook any discrepancies in the issue this week, as we are yet hardly back to our working stride.

INFLUENCE OF REV. J. CAMERON IS FAR-REACHING

Perhaps more than any other feature writer in Toronto Daily Star, are R. E. Knowles' writings enjoyed. Apart from his fine sense of using the right word at the right place, is his art of drawing out the feelings of the party he is interviewing. Recently he interviewed the mother of Hon. Earl Rowe, the new Conservative leader for this province, and in so doing, the interviewer honors himself as well as the party interviewed.

In closing talk with Mrs. Rowe, Mr. Knowles asked her if she could name any one minister who had meant more to her than any other. Mrs. Rowe thought a moment and told him that the late Rev. James Cameron, that well-known pioneer saint, who labored so faithfully and lovingly to pioneer gatherings at Chatsworth and Dornoch, perhaps had more influence than any other in directing her life.

In fact the County of Grey was his parish, and Mr. Knowles added his personal pride in the fact that his baptismal blessing came from the same pioneer pastor in Grey County where with other illustrious men like Joe Clark, he first saw the light of day. No wonder they prospered!

There are few residents in this section of South Grey today who are able to give personal incidents in connection with Rev. James and his brother, Rev. Charles Cameron, but their names are revered in many homes simply for the wonderful work they did in a spiritual sense, when ministerial help and encouragement was seemingly more appreciated than it is today.

YOU CAN DRIVE CAREFULLY THE RECORD PROVES IT

This week locally started auspiciously from the safety angle: not a single traffic fatality.

This encouraging record was made despite a week of torrid atmosphere that made traffic driving heavy.

What's the answer?

The answer is that we CAN and DO drive carefully when our own safety is at stake.

We observe motoring laws because it is dangerous to us personally not to do so.

Col. J. B. Maclean, President of the Maclean Publishing Co., Toronto:

"I first met Mr. Ramage at Flesher-ton when he was attending a convention. We occupied the same room. We took to each other then; and that warm feeling, started then, continued throughout life. He showed it in his great kindness to my mother which I shall never forget. It seems to me, that in her latter years, she depended upon him as her most trustworthy friend in Durham. Through his personal example and associations, but particularly through his paper, he has exerted a great influence on South Grey life which will live long after him. I can make no better wish than that his boys, in their papers, will carry on in their districts for many years to come, the traditions, principles and policies he taught them; and persistently fight the growing tendencies, especially in the big city papers, toward lower moral private and public standards....."

Dr. William Farquharson, Toronto, former pastor Durham Pres. church:

"I was very sorry to note the death of Mr Ramage in Saturday's paper. He was one of the earliest of my acquaintances in Durham, and we were co-workers in many lines of public interest. I need not tell you that I learned to honor and respect him more and more as the years went past.....His loss will be felt by a wide circle but more particularly the vacant place will be realized in the home."

Col. D. M. Robertson, former Grand Sec'y, Sons of Scotland:

"I note with much regret the death of Mr. Ramage, with whom I have been associated in connection with the Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association for many years and whose friendship and integrity I valued very highly. He was one of the pillars in building up the Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association and a very valued citizen in the community in which he resided for so many years. His counsel and good judgment will be greatly missed by all with whom he came in contact during his long and useful career."

J. A. Campbell, Toronto, Pres. of Campbell Construction Co.:

"I thought a great deal of Mr. Ramage: a stable character of the highest standard, along with the most kindly temperament. He was getting along in years and when I saw him last year could see he was getting past his usual active and progressive mind, though his strength carried his spirit alert. I cannot forget how quiet he was, while usually his conversation set an outstanding brightness that seemed gone....."

We might crash, wreck the car and kill ourselves.

The absence of accidents the past week locally, proves what we have long contended: That safety in motoring is a personal matter; that motor car accidents are personal accidents, avoidable almost always if the man behind the wheel exercises prudence and common consideration for pedestrians and other motorists.

These are not theories.

They are facts proven by the record of the last six days.

At Queen's Park
BY THE WATCHMAN

Toronto, July 23rd. —Apart altogether from political differences, there can be no disputing the fact that the action of the government in arresting the red agitators who have been causing violence in various municipalities, was a sound move, calculated to create a feeling of confidence in the minds of the taxpayers who have to foot the bills for relief. The plight of those people who are forced to go on relief evokes sympathy among those more fortunately situated, but the average job-holder today is getting more than a little fed up with the abuses of government aid.

Jobless citizens and their families have a right to receive help from the state, but they should realize that the money to pay for it comes from the pockets of people who, in the main, are hard pressed to meet their obligations and maintain a decent standard of life. No one wants to see people suffer through no fault of their own, but when relief recipients, inspired by communist agitators, resort to violence to achieve their ends, it is true to call a halt to government benevolence. If the unemployed continue to listen to the insidious propaganda of the agitators in their midst, they are going to forfeit the sympathy and consideration of those who pay the taxes.

The arrest of the communist leaders did not come any too soon. The government held its hand, hoping to effect a settlement of the trouble without calling in the law. But violence increased and it was finally decided to show the unemployed and the radicals that law and order must prevail, even though it meant the jailing of scores of men. The Heppburn government is striving manfully to cope with a tremendous problem. It cannot succeed entirely in solving it. No government can do it single-handed, even under more favorable circumstances. But the big point is this: no one is starving in Ontario. There is no malnutrition among children. This is important. True, being on relief is not to be envied, but it is the best governments of today can do for the jobless and their families.

The Heppburn government, after giving careful consideration to the matter, has decided to absorb the 10 per cent relief cut put into effect for the summer months by the Dominion Government. It is realized that municipalities can no longer assume further burdens. Many are at breaking point now. So the government takes up the slack and pays out the additional amount, estimated at $100,000 a month.

One of these days there will be a rebellion among the taxpayers of Ontario. It will be a peaceful revolt against taxation. Mr and Mrs Citizen don't mind paying for the maintenance of the jobless, but they object, and rightly so, to having to foot the bill for more than is needed.

One of the sad effects of a prolonged depression is the breaking down of the morale among the unemployed. Many men today are quite content to receive state aid for the rest of their lives and the desire to work, even when it is available has disappeared. It is a tragedy no less, and it constitutes a problem that will worry governments for many years to come, long after industry and commerce have achieved an even keel.

A FINAL WORD

Dedicated to the memory of the late Charles Ramage
By GEORGE WRAY LEMON

Perhaps they'll say of me:
"He never twisted Truth to serve the hour
Nor bowed the knee to let them fit a yoke."

"He fought his last great fight
Stripped to the waist—bare-handed, scorned gloves—
Not hard, nor stern, nor arrogantly vain;
His heart was open wide when wrong was done.

"A cause he loved seemed lost?
'Twas not for him—it only faltered—
He brought up his last reserves
And threw them in the fray—and victory came!

"Withal, he loved the simple, priceless things;
A sun-drenched meadow with a brook that sings;
A grey winding road at twilight,
The hush of dawn—or church bells in an old tower far away.

"He lived his life—a failure, some will say—
Because he never had a lust for gold—
But he has left a memory that endures
Among a few choice souls, who called him friend.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING to be COURTEOUS to other motorists

I ASK YOU to please remember, as you hurry along the highways bound for some distant point, that it costs you nothing to be courteous to other drivers and it saves you money.

- It costs you nothing to sound your horn on the highway as you are about to overtake a fellow motorist and it may prevent an accident and thereby save you money.
- It costs you nothing to give the other fellow a wide berth when you meet him and it may prevent a side-swipe and thereby save you money.
- It costs you nothing to hand-signal your intention to slow down, turn or stop and it may prevent a collision and thereby save you money.
- It costs you nothing to "nip" along at the speed of the traffic you are in and it prevents other motorists from having to "cut-in" in order to get "there" and thereby removes one of the greatest causes of costly accidents.
- It costs you nothing to be courteous and considerate of your companions of the road and it will prevent accidents and thereby save dollars and cents for everybody and prevent broken bones and broken hearts as well.

So I appeal to you from the standpoint of sheer economy to be courteous to other motorists on all occasions.

Practise and preach the golden rule of the road— "Show to others the same courtesy that you would like to have shown to you".

Sincerely yours,
B. J. Brewster
