

HYMENEAL
RAINSBERGER — BROWN

A quiet wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, Holstein, on Saturday August 15th at 12.30 o'clock when their eldest daughter, Wilma Aileen, became the bride of Theron Robert Rainsberger, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Rainsberger, Dundee, Michigan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. G. Court M. A. of Holstein Presbyterian Church. Miss Marie Aitken played the wedding music and during the signing of the register, Miss Maude Waring of Toronto, sang "Because."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white moss crepe, fashioned on simple lines, with a short jacket. A halo of silver orange blossoms and silver sandals completed the ensemble and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley.

The bridal attendants were Miss Nora Shortt as maid of honor, gowns in sky blue organza and Miss V. Leth as bridesmaid, gowned in pink lace and both carried nosegays of sweet peas and roses. Mr. Harry Cowan acted as groomsmen.

'Folk' Schools of Denmark

The Parliament Buildings in Copenhagen showed in several ways the predominance of the agricultural industry. The beautiful paintings in the parliamentary cafe had as their subjects horses by the sea and harvesting. In one of the lobbies many Danish sayings are inscribed and illustrated; one meaning "I feel on top of the world" pictured a cat sitting on a ham, their equivalent saying being "I feel like a cat on top of the pork."

Our first stop in Sweden was at Gothenburg, the chief port on the West side of Sweden. The original city was much influenced by the the Dutch settlers and traders, whose mark is left in the fine massive type of building, tree lined, wide streets and many parks. Recently new buildings have been erected, a fine museum, state theatre and concert hall, all very modern in style, but so grouped that they fit harmoniously into the old city.

By watching the crowds of people on the streets we were soon aware that the Swedes are more formal than the Danes, and that their country has more natural wealth. The people are much better dressed but more restrained in manner, answering courteously any questions asked, but with the directness and brevity of the Scots. Automobiles were much more in evidence and instead of the small English models which we expected, we found them driving cars which looked like our own except that they had a right-hand drive.

Europeans eat out of doors a great deal in the summer time and their amusement in the evening is to go to one of the fine gardens where they hear good music while they walk about admiring the flowers, or sit at tables having their after-dinner coffee or tea. We found it a pleasant custom which we hope will spread to the North American continent.

Unfortunately for visitors the theatres operas and music halls are closed in summer, due to the migration of the people to the country. As one guide said, "Only the tourists and a few guides are left in Scandinavian cities in the summer."

The Swedish countryside is mountainous and wooded with small patches of tillable land, but the crops were better than in Denmark. The harvesting has been made difficult in both places, however, by the wet weather; or possibly it is always wet in harvest time and this accounts for the elaborate methods used in drying the hay and grain. One often reads of hayricks, which turn out to be a sort of clothes line arrangement. From four to seven tall poles are driven into the ground and between these several strands of wire are strung. The hay is forked onto the wires where it is left to hang.

A train journey of approximately three hundred miles brought us to Stockholm, which is built on 14 islands and is called "the city of shimmering water". Here we spent a most enjoyable week. The fact that the islands are mostly solid rock and that they are connected by innumerable bridges, makes rents high and has led to extensive housing projects by the municipality and the state.

In every other regard, however, the cost of living is low, and one can live much more cheaply in Sweden, Denmark and England than in Canada. It is true fruits and vegetables are expensive, but the diet is restricted to meat, fish, cheese and breads, with quantities of beer. The lack of sweets and desserts was so noticeable to people accustomed to Canadian food that we found ourselves supplementing the really excellent meals by chocolate bars and the delicate pastries which we saw in the shops but never on the table.

In the week we "did" the city thoroughly. We visited art galleries and museums, churches which are apparently built for beauty rather than use, great co-operative wholesales and factories, co-op. retail shops and department stores, adult educational centres run by the co-operative and in vain hunted for places of amusement in the evening.

On the last day, a Sunday, we visited the unique park covering about a hundred acres, known as Scansen. Here are collected specimens of old houses of many periods, complete with their furniture, hand woven hangings, platters of wood powder or china, according to their age, and the many little things that were commonly used about the house. There were also two old churches and we were interested in a section devoted to buildings from Lapland and a small herd of reindeer which were not happy in their unusual surroundings. On the day we were at Scansen a folk dancing festival was being held and we saw many young men and women in costumes of the country doing representative dances from all parts of Sweden on the grounds. They made a pretty picture for the crowds who drank tea and watched them—but more anon.

Sincerely,
AGNES C. MACPHAIL.
