LESSON XIII
 Messages from Genesis — John 1:1-5; Luke 17:26-32; Galatians 2:6-8; Hebrews 11:1-12; 2 Peter 2:4-10.
 Printed Text — Hebrews 11:3-10, 17-22
 Golden Text — "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them and greeted them from afar, and having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." — Hebrews 11:13.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING
 Time — John wrote his Prologue about 90 A.D. The teaching of Jesus recorded in Luke 17 was given in the winter of A.D. 30. Paul wrote the Epistle to the Galatians about A. D. 57. The date of the Epistle to the Hebrews may be placed about A.D. 65-67 A.D.

Place — There are so many different places recorded in various passages that it would only be confusing to enumerate them, except to say that in Hebrews are from events which took place in Palestine, in which country also Jesus taught, Paul wrote his Epistle to the Galatians while at Corinth. We do not know with certainty where the Epistle to the Hebrews was written.

"By faith we understand that the world has been framed by the word of God, so that what is seen hath not been made out of things which do appear." There are fifteen special instances of the work of faith in this chapter, in addition to the general enumeration beginning at verse 32. Here in the third verse we have the first specific instance, namely, that it is by faith in God's revelation to us how creation took place that we believe that the world was framed by the word of God, i.e., by God speaking, and that the visible world was not made from things that already in existence.

"By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, through which he had witness borne to him that he was righteous, God bearing witness in respect of his gifts — and through it he being dead yet speaketh." The offering of Abel is recorded in Gen. 4:4, where we read that it was accepted by God, who, at the same time, refused the offering of Cain's brother, Abel. The offering of Abel was a slain lamb, while the offering of Cain was some product of the ground. It would seem that God had told these brothers that an animal sacrifice was necessary when making an offering for the atonement of sin, and Abel, by faith in what God had said, and carrying out God's command, showed himself to be a righteous man.

"By faith Enoch was translated so that he should not see death; and he was not found, because God translated him; for he had had witness borne to him that before his translation he had been well-pleasing unto God." The reference here is to Gen. 5:21. Enoch pleased God because he had faith in God, and God, in turn, delivered him from death, and took him to glory because of his faith. This does not mean that all people who have faith can expect to be translated as was Enoch. However, it is clear from the New Testament Scriptures that all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, when Christ returns to Earth, will not die, but will be caught up to be with the Lord, undergoing a change but not suffering the sting of death (1 Cor. 15:51).

"And without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." To question God's promise is to show a lack of faith, and this is sometimes a hard point with Christians who have endured many an ordering or great losses. We must show ourselves completely on the base of God and believe that he does all things well.

"By faith, Noah, being warned of God, concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark, to the saving of his house; through which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is according to faith." Here again we note that faith on the part of Noah was not only a conviction of the truthfulness of the warning of God, but actually acting in the light of that warning — God warned him that judgment was coming, and that only an ark would ever preserve him during the flood; Noah believed that warning and prepared the ark.

"By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing whither he went." God's call to Abraham is recorded in Gen. 12:1-3. Abraham had no idea of the nature or the location of that land to which God was calling him. He knew that God had promised to give him an inheritance, and he simply followed the leading of God until he came to that place that God then told him was to be a perpetual possession for his descendants.

"By faith he became a sojourner." The word sojourner means "one who lives in a place without the right of citizenship," and, consequently, "one who lives on earth as a stranger." The idea is perfectly expressed in 1 Peter 2:11, and also in Phil. 2:26 — "our citizenship is in heaven." In the land of promise." Of course this refers to Canaan, which is called the Land of Promise, simply because God promised it to Abraham and his descendants, as we read continually in the book of Genesis. "As in a land not his own," Abraham never actually did come to possess the Land of Promise. It belonged to the Canaanites when God promised it to Abraham, and, during his life and the lives of Isaac and Jacob, the land, except that particular portion in which their families lived, never was their own. "Dwelling in tents, with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise." This trait of dwelling in tents, pitched to-day in one place and tomorrow in another, indicates the temporary, unsettled nature of Abraham's abode in Canaan, which his immediate descendants, Isaac and Jacob shared.

"For he looked for the city which hath no foundations." This city, of course, was not an earthly city, no matter how great or glorious it might be, but a heavenly city, "the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem" (Heb. 12:22), which is so continuously referred to by the apostle John in the last two chapters of the book of Revelation. "Whose builder and maker is God." Literally this might read "of which architect and master builder is God."

"By faith, Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac; yea, he that had gladly received the promises was offering up his only begotten son. "Even he to whom it was said, in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Accounting that God is able to raise up, even from the dead; from whence he did also in a figure receive him back." The reference here is to the events described in Gen. 22:1-14. There is one marvelous statement here which is not even found in the records of Genesis, namely, that Abraham believed when he was about to offer Isaac, that God would actually raise Isaac up from the dead, and that not in some indistinct future, but, then, so that the promises of God concerning the seed of Abraham would be kept. Abraham also knew that God's world would be kept, and he knew that if Isaac died, the only thing that could happen so that God could keep his promises would be that God would bring his dead son back out of death again.

"By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau, even concerning things to come. The reference here is to Gen. 27:23-29 and 33 and 40. These promises to his two sons concerned the future in which he had absolute confidence because of his faith in God's revelation.

"By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff." The reference here is to the remarkable dying prophecies of Jacob, which he uttered after he went down into Egypt, recorded in Genesis 49. When it says he worshipped leaning upon the top of his staff, it simply means that he was too feeble to rise and kneel, or stand, and that he bowed his head in an attitude of prayer while resting his hands, probably on the top of his staff while reclining on his couch.

"By faith, Joseph, when his end was nigh, made mention of the departure of the children of Israel, and gave commandment concerning his bones." The reference here is to Genesis 50:24-25. Joseph, though hundreds of miles away from the land that God had promised to his great-grandfather, Abraham, to his grandfather, Isaac, and to his father, Jacob, was absolutely persuaded that that land belonged to Abraham's seed, and that some day the descendants of Jacob would go back to that land to receive it according to God's promise. These mighty patriarchs lived, spoke, planned, travelled, and blessed their children all in the light of, and in accordance with the word of God which had been given to them and in which they had such implicit confidence. To sum it all up, these men lived by the faith in God's word.

The Honeymooners

Fashions and manners may change but Niagara Falls still continues to draw the honeymooners and, according to local hotel-keepers and officials, more have registered at local hotels in the past two months than in six months last year. Immigration officials report large numbers of American honeymooners crossing to Canada every day. In any gathering, almost anywhere, it is possible to find a large number present who spent wedding trips here and look back kindly on their visits to the falls. All the world loves a lover and we have always had a kindly feeling for the honeymooners, so generation after generation of married lovers continue to come here. Long may they come. Welcome may they always be. —The Niagara Falls Review.

Law on Soil Drifting

A couple of years ago the legislators of the province decided that the time had come to take some compulsory action, and a soil drifting measure was passed which made it possible for neighbor to sue neighbor if drifted soil caused damage to land.

We have never heard of the act being invoked, but it might be a good thing if it were. It might focus public attention on the problem and bring about more concerted action in this phase of farm rehabilitation work in the West.

There is a strong tendency, we have noticed, for farmers to say that soil drifting control methods are fine "for the other fellow;" but they do not apply them at home. —Lethbridge Herald.

Milk Protection For Tourists

Ordinary raw milk heated to 142 degrees in a double boiler for thirty minutes and then chilled is free from dangerous bacteria. This process is called pasteurization, and from pasteurized milk there is little or no likelihood of contracting bovine tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid fever, undulant fever or septic sore throat. Toronto and almost 5 other Canadian centres make pasteurization compulsory for the protection of their people. But when their people go touring the country, this protection, and the supply, can no longer be exercised by the home municipality. It remains for the individual to demand pasteurized milk and government tested water at the resorts which he patronizes.

The Health League of Canada is going to promote this form of tourist safety by listing the resorts in Ontario which furnish guests with pasteurized milk only. United States tourists are beginning to ask for such information, and to some this will no doubt be a deciding factor. It will, at any rate, do much to promote public health.

There have been in the past, resorts which prided themselves upon serving their guests "milk fresh from the cow" — not like the poor stuff you get in the city." Such milk, unfortunately, may be full of harmful germs. The cow may have tuberculosis, or it may have been wading in a typhoid-contaminated pool. Pasteurization is the simple process which removes the likelihood that any disease will be transmitted.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

Executives at the Twentieth Century Fox studio are disappointed the public hasn't made more of a fuss over Simone Simon, so they are going to put her in a comedy and see if she goes over better. They are teaming her with Jack Haley, who made such a hit in "Wake Up and Live," in a fast-moving comedy called "Love at Work."

Motion picture studio officials always change the subject when anyone asks if their stars really sing or if some singer substitutes for them, but radio listeners can recognize their favorite voices under any circumstances. They insist that Buddy Clark of the Hit Parade did Jack Haley's singing, that Virginia Verrill sang for both Jean Harlow and Virginia Bruce and that in "The Great Barnum" it was Francis White who sang for Miss Bruce.

Warner Brothers have arranged to borrow Miriam Hopkins for two pictures and it looks as if it would keep the entire studio busy for weeks finding stories to which she won't raise a violent objection. Scheduled to appear with Errol Flynn in "The Perfect Specimen," she flatly refused. Instead she will make a tearful little romance called "Epitaph" supported by Kay Francis and Charles Winiger. After that, the Warner Brothers studio would like to have her in "Sisters," with Kay Francis.

Miriam Hopkins

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has decided that he likes the United States better after all. While he was in England, he realized his ambition to become a producer, and felt so grateful to the countrymen who backed him that he thought he would live there always. Coming back to Hollywood to make just one picture, "The Prisoner of Zenda," he found when it was finished and he was free to go back to England that he just couldn't bear to leave all his childhood friends.

ODDS AND ENDS — Joe Penner doesn't mention ducks even once in "New Faces," which is being filmed by R-K-O, and furthermore he appears black face for the first time. — Ken Murray always dresses most conservatively, when he shows up for a broadcast, but around home he goes in for the ditziest colored smoking jackets and lounging robes — Motion picture producers, are wildly enthusiastic over the intimate, caressing voice of Rosalind Greene who announces Mrs. Roosevelt's radio program, and since they have heard that she is young and extraordinarily beautiful they are rushing to her with contracts for the pictures.

Drugs That May Make You Deaf

The names of common drugs which make habitual users permanently hard of hearing was the most immediately useful information presented at the convention of the American Otological Society at Long Beach, L. I., last week. Those drugs are according to Dr. Hermon Marshall Taylor, of Jacksonville, Fla., salicylates (aspirin, aspirin, salicylate, salicylato, bacco, alcohol, opium, arsenic (strychnin), lead mercury, phosphorus, oil of chenopodium, aniline dyes, insulin.

Of all the nerves in the body, the auditory nerve is most sensitive to drugs, said Dr. Taylor, and a majority of the 10,000,000 people in the United States, who do not hear clearly may well blame their medicine cabinets and self-indulgence. Some drugs affect the hearing centres of the brain, others the ear itself, said Dr. Taylor. Most harmful is quinine, which has been found in the brains of deaf babies of women who took this drug to stimulate childbirth.

Among other avoidable causes of deafness is high flying, according to Dr. Clarence H. Smith, of Manhattan. In such cases dizziness and ringing sounds may accompany the deafness. Such flyers may be "attacked in the air by a paroxysm of disabling vertigo."

Bride Provides His Trousseau

In Albania, She Gives Him Just Enough Clothes For Lifetime

In Albania, the June bridegroom, not the bride sets all the breaks. And when he marries, his fiancée presents him with a supply of clothing that will last him the rest of his life, according to Neshume Zaimi, 22-year-old Albanian girl who is studying at Wesleyan and who has just published her autobiography, "Daughter of the Balkans."

Albanian brides in Tirana, the capital, give their husbands about 40 pairs of trousers, a like number of shirts and, in addition, bring with them quantities of hand-woven bed and table linen for their new homes.

Among the chief items of the clothing of the bride are her pantaloons. The bigger and fuller these are, Miss Zaimi explains, in her autobiography, the more aristocratic the wearer. The wife of an important man, she says, will have as much as 29 yards of material in a single pair of pantaloons.

Because it is just across the Adriatic from Italy and can now be reached in a short time, by airplane, Miss Zaimi believes Albania will soon be visited by many Americans. "The Albanians are very hospitable," she declares. "In outlying districts they receive all travellers as honored guests, kill the best lamb or turkey for food and provide free lodging. They consider hospitably the greatest of all virtues and have a saying that 'the people of all the world are our brothers and sisters.'"

Giving Concrete The Water Cure

Protection During the Hardening Period

Water is both an enemy and a close friend to concrete. Too much water used during the mixture period weakens it, and too little applied after the concrete is laid also weakens it. A safe rule to follow is to use the smallest quantity of mixing water that will produce a sufficiently plastic mixture for the work in hand, and then to give the surface of the concrete as much curing water as possible after the concrete is placed.

The small amount of mixing water used soon evaporates. Therefore the water content of freshly placed concrete should be conserved by keeping it damp during its early hardening period and providing plenty of curing water to allow the concrete to harden under favourable conditions.

Protection during the hardening period increases the resistance of the concrete to wear; and this is an important consideration in floors, pavements and platforms.

Freshly placed concrete can be kept damp in several ways. Drenching the sub-base and forms with water before concrete is placed will reduce absorption. Horizontal surfaces, such as floors and pavements can be covered with damp sand the day after they are laid when they have hardened sufficiently to prevent pitting the surface, and kept damp by frequent sprinkling. Sometimes walls are covered with canvas or burlap, which is drenched with water several times a day.

Keeping the concrete damp the first ten days will give the owner at least over 65 percent better value for his money. Three weeks' protection will give still greater increases in value.

Arousing Child's Interest in V

It's One of the Many Duties Parents Must Undertake

To get children to tackle often takes all the income mother can summon, and they are children, but love to learn, and for every dollar they put in, there is a dollar in the adult world.

There are two kinds of routine occupations of the young: one particular chore, and the other routine tasks that take up the time.

Now, all children will do more rather willingly, accept training. Nothing becomes a habit, unless repeated and comes part of life. But this with the exceptional job.

School, errands and a chores comprise the child's program. Such things are a habit, for otherwise he would establish any work habit as is likely, however, to be added task outside of his responsibilities an impossible.

There are several ways of sound his prejudice, but each will have to study her child's position and reach up to interest and emotion to interest.

Weird Collection Shipped to C.N.E.

There is now being sent Georgetown, Democratic, South is, a large consignment of animals and birds for the zoo at the Canadian National Museum. Native hunters and trappers, engaged for many months, are engaged for many months, and will include giant anteaters, many species of mammals, birds and a white reptile.

A feature of the collection promises to "steal the show" as the children are given a shipment of tiny mammals of the monkey family. The next comes in consignment request of William Charles, representative of Boston's General, Limited, of which the children will find a known as a dale Zoo.
