The Opening Of Parliament

"The rainbow of (the only) hope", and an air that should be played on the Peace Tower chimneys for the occasion. By A. G. Racey in the Montreal Daily Star.

THE CURFEW TOLLS THE KNELL OF PARTING DAY

Commencing next Monday the curfew bell will sound each night at nine o'clock in Chesley and all boys and girls 14 years of age and under must be at home by that hour. The Council has decided to clamp down on the noisy, boisterous activities of certain youths and has instructed Chief Vance to step on the lads who, seemingly wouldn't listen to reason. A window was recently broken in the new town hall and somebody else broke the vitrolite near the entrance to the town offices and it is about time there was a 'tightening up' in the methods used in making some of the youths behave themselves while out in public.

HOME-GROWN SWEATERS

Over 33 1/2 million dollars' worth of wool and its products were imported last year, into Canada. The United Kingdom supplied most of it. Of course, this included anything which was made of wool, everything from the raw product to carpets, socks and underwear.

Recently the Department of Agriculture had on display at an exhibition woolen sweaters and dresses made from home-grown, home carded and home dyed wool. A notable progress in handling of wool in our own country is quite evident.

An interesting feature at the exhibition was a sheep shearing demonstration. A recognized expert on shearing and preparing the fleece for market clipped the woolen coat from a sheep in two minutes.

The sheep industry throughout Canada is in much better shape for development than it was a few years ago. There were 48,900 more sheep on Canadian farms at December 1, 1937, than there were the year before.

Canadian breeders have an enviable reputation throughout the world for their sheep. Last year sheep for breeding purposes were sent to New Zealand and Newfoundland and now there are enquiries coming from South America.

KNOX CORNERS

There was a very good attendance at Knox on Sunday. Mr Kaye took for his text "Self-pity." Are we tempted to pity ourselves? If we are we should look around us at those who are so much worse off than ourselves and we will be surprised how much we have to thank God for. We find this weakness even in great characters like Jeremiah and Job but not in Jesus. Our pastor also had a good talk for the boys and the girls on "What shall we give in exchange for our soul, or our life." Boys and girls make foolish exchanges or "trading" as we term it, but are not old as well as young exchanging the higher things of the soul, yes even Eternal Life for the pleasures of the world which can never satisfy. Mr Kaye would like to see more of the boys and girls attend the service.

McAllister read "The musings of a missionary mother" their sacrifices and the joys they miss in their work so far from the homeland. Another reading was given entitled, "Inasmuch" showing the awful suffering among the babies in India. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me", Jesus said. Roll call was answered by Bible verses, on "Os." Mrs C. McAllister gave the treasurer's report showing that we have exceeded our allocation. Mrs J. M. Opening Days in Dom. Parliament

MISS MAC PHAIL'S WEEKLY LETTER

Parliament has been opened, the formalities observed, the brief sittings of an hour and a half one day and an hour the next concluded; but had I missed all the opening ceremonies, I would know that we are under way by the skirt of Tom Reid's pipes. Every evening after supper (dinner) the mood of the Scottish member from New Westminster pervades the corridors and courts, in laments, fighting songs, or ballads of sentiment. It's a homecoming sound.

The crowds for the opening seemed greater than usual. Even the space in the inner Senate lobby, formerly used by members who, tired of straining to hear the King's speech fell back there to visit with each other, was filled with women in evening dress, leaving only a narrow corridor through which the members could pass, to occupy the restricted space behind the bar of the Senate (brass bar). Just a little more crowding would eliminate the members.

This year I had the same feeling of revulsion that I experienced at the opening in my first years here—richly gowned women, strapless, backless gowns, uniformed and bemuddled men, with the hierarchy in purple, chief justices in scarlet and ermine and, in short, the whole elaborate ceremony. It would be a lovely pageant if it were an expression of Canadian life. But it is too sharp a contrast to the struggling agriculturist, the industrial worker, the unemployed, the single transient. It makes one realize the truth of the statement that "One half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives."

Couldn't something be done to have really representative Canadians attend the opening? By representative I mean farmers, industrial workers, teachers, unemployed, miners, senior students, clerical workers. The difficulty is that the same people come year after year; Ottawa people, civil servants, the official set. I would like to see one gallery set aside for Canadians who come from long distances and co-operation on the part of railways, to enable people of small or non-existent means to attend. One could feel then that Canada, in miniature, witnessed the ceremony.

A young Alberta teacher, who was my guest this year, was thrilled by the spectacle.

For the members, crowded as they are, the ceremony is an ordeal, if they wait to hear the King's speech read in both languages, in English first and then in French, by the Governor-General. While they stood, wearily, this year, members made constructive suggestions to each other. One was that the Governor-General read half way through in one language and then switch to the other. Since many of his audience couldn't hear him anyway, they wouldn't know but that it had been read through in each language. And another suggestion was that we had better play safe and have the speech read one year in English and the next year in French.

Further wisdom was cut off by Dr Beauchesne (the Clerk of the House) indignantly whispering, as he gilded past: "We must have silence; I will have silence." But even he cannot keep 245 members quiet while the Governor reads the speech.

Usually the speech is a forecast of legislation. This year it was that, augmented by long explanations of how well we have solved our agricultural and unemployment problems! rejoicings over the much anticipated visit of Their Majesties, and the official visit paid by the President of the United States.

The speech expressed satisfaction that Canada is still friendly with all nations, but showed anxiety over aggressive policies which are disturbing every part of the world. And on this observation, it hangs increased appropriations for defence and the formation of a purchasing board for the defence services. "To ensure that, where private manufacture is necessary, the profits in connection with such are fair and reasonable."

The trade agreement between Canada and the United States will be submitted for approval and an effort made to renew the pact with the West Indies. The fishing industry is to be aided, prairie farm rehabilitation to be continued (though nobody knows just what to do with the wheat when it is grown), the public works programme extended, the vote for youth training increased, air passenger service inaugurated, report of the Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations submitted and a number of bills amended. That about covers it, with the explanations omitted.

The first sittings of the House of Commons were particularly interesting. It is not often that a leader of a national party is introduced as a new member, as was the Honourable R. J. Manion, leader of the Conservative party, on the first day. Although a member from 1917 until the last election, he is, so far as this Parliament is concerned, a new member. The House gave him a hearty welcome, which was voiced in a graceful speech by Mr. King. Other new members presented to the House were Mr. Homuth of Waterloo, Peter Bercovitch, a distinguished Jewish lawyer, who succeeded the much loved Sam Jacobs of Montreal, and Mr. Matthews of Brandon: two Conservatives and three Liberals.

It seemed to me that at the first sitting there was a note, a clear note of sincerity and goodwill. Certainly the tributes to the two members who have died since the last session, Sam Jacobs of Montreal and David Beaulieu of Brandon, were heartfelt and genuine. Both men were fine types and worthy of praise. Sam Jacobs was distinguished by his wisdom, broad sympathies and keen but kindly wit. His was a vivid spirit that will be long with us. I cherish the memory of my friendship with him.

Sincerely was served by the return of Mr. H. H. Stevens to the Conservative fold and by Percy Rowe M.P. a former Social Creditor, taking his seat with the C.C.F. group, with whose policy he finds himself in sympathy. Canada would be well served if all members who think similarly could sit and work together; a realignment is urgently needed.

According to the gossip around the House, the story of the apparent termination of the Hepburn-King feud runs like this. The Liberal members in Ontario, provincial and federal have always helped each other in elections and are determined to continue to do so. But, with quarrelling leaders, their co-operative plan was shattered, so they simply said: "Compose your differences." It was a case of the followers leading. No wonder Mr. Hepburn had to go to Australia!

DROMORE Y. P. S. MEET

The Young Peoples' Society of Amos held their regular meeting at the home of Rev. Mr and Mrs Kaye, on the 9th, with a good attendance. After the usual business, Mr Kaye led in prayer, and Elva Bunston read the scripture lesson.

The topic on "Citizenship" was given by Margaret Leith, and a reading by Mrs Russel Taylor. A duet was sung by Lorne Eccles and Arch. Rowell. Mr. Kaye gave an interesting talk on Christmas customs in England. Miss Ila Fell of Dundalk, spoke on Symphony Orchestras, and her talk was much appreciated by all. A hymn and the Benediction closed the devotional part of the meeting. A social hour followed after which lunch was served.
