The Durham Review P. RAMAGE Editor and Proprietor

The newly amalgamated church journal of the United Church will be in future known as "The Observer". It is a combination of the "United Church Record and Missionary Review" and "The New Outlook."

We are back into prosperous times once more, judging by the rosy reports of church annual meetings throughout the country. We noted only one church lamenting the fallen church attendance during the summer months.

Hon. David Jamieson in an interview, would discourage parliamentary life for a man of average means, on the ground, we suppose, that it plays havoc with a business career.

The new conservation dam to be built near Fergus is causing Hugh Templin, editor of the "News-Record" and a member of the Provincial Conservation Commission, to wonder what the design of the new structure will be like.

WHEN A MINISTER LOSES A PAIR OF GLOVES

The pastor of Epworth United Church in Kingsville lost a pair of gloves and inserted an ad in the local paper which seems to be worth repeating: "Personal: Will the person who took—by mistake—a pair of leather gloves off the desk of the Kingsville post office, since he is known—to God—return them to the post office. He will get his reward—in heaven. (Rev.) D. A. Cowan, owner by purchase."

Neighbor Nights

In the last two articles there have been suggestions and techniques of carrying on community gatherings, with the point in view of creating a more intelligent, responsive electorate.

Also the hope, that examples of other communities may arouse in us the desire for self help. Realizing that our cultural and economic betterment may be much closer at hand than Queen's Park or Ottawa.

When a rural folk school was first mentioned in Ontario the questions that arose were—is it necessary? Is it feasible? What can it accomplish? First is it necessary.—Today as never before the young people have to face new conditions and ideas in all aspects of life.

Now the folk school seemed to answer all these questions. It offered a medium, which by its very functioning, would break down the reserve, following free exchange of ideas in the cultural field. Then with a group, meeting together continuously for eight days it would give sufficient time to diagnose farm conditions and point to ways and means farm organization might materially benefit both the buying of farm necessities and the selling of farm produce.

Next issue will contain an article on the "Neighbor Night" at Park Head. Floyd Briesbach, of Collingwood will be the contributor.

COUNTY LIBRARIES

The County Library is a complete unit and is a separate organization from any one Library—is a library in itself whose purpose is to serve any part of a county wherever there is a community large or small who wish to share in the benefit of receiving more books than they already have or for small centres which have no access to any library or one in which they have such a poor assortment of books they might just as well have none.

Next week — County Libraries in other counties.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

BAPTIST ANNUAL MEETING

Durham Baptist Church annual meeting held recently, received reports from all departments which showed faithful work had been done, a goodly sum given to Missions, and a balance on hand to start the New Year. The canvass for the second mortgage on the Parsonage is more than half completed. $2000 is to be raised by the first of May.
