Decorators Favor Bright Interiors

Newest Trend Is Toward More Decided Colours, But They Must Be Skilfully Blended

Never be afraid to use vivid colors in furnishing schemes-the only thing to be careful of is avolding an effect more suited to a game's room than a room to live or sleep in. Most people are overcautious rather than too daring. and the result is a dreary "mincelike" effect of fawn, grey and hopeless beige.

Above all, have the courage of your convictions and choose carpets and curtains that you would like to live wit' and that you feel express your personality, but not to the exclusion of the taste and comfort of the other people who have to live in the same room.

Use your own taste but if you Indulge in vivid reds, blue or yellows, always remember to confine the strongest and most vital colors to small acessories with larger masses of the more neutral tones to act as balance.

If brightly colored hangings are not suitable for the room you are prosposing to decorate, an ideal method is to work up your color scheme from a favorite picture.

Blooms Tinting Alaskan Snows

Amazing Sight of Flowers Atop Glistening Glaciers

Flowers of the ice gardens on snow-capped Alaskan peaks and nearby coastal glaciers are bursting forth in a riot of color under the Arctic sun.

These plants that grow in the ice and snow are called cryovegetation and little was known about them until Dr. Ersebet Kol, director of the botanical laboratory at the University of Szeged, Hungary, went to Mount McKinley National Park. Alaska, to direct an expedition for the Smithsonian Institution of Washington.

Growing Right In the Ice There Dr. Kol saw and studied the amazing sight of rich brownpurple flower beds atop glistening glaciers, greenish fields spreading from the terminal moraines up mountain sides of ice and the spectacular red snow. In the mountains above Juneau she found snow fleas, so thick that they lay like a grayviolet blanket over the snow fields to a depth of half an inch.

These ice plants are members of the universal and primitive plant group, the algae family. They extract what meagre nourishment they need from the slightly melting ice under the Arctic sun's glare.

Traffic Officer Must Learn to Resist A Beautiful Woman Driver Who Ignores Regulations

A traffic officer must learn to resist a beautiful woman, Judge King 3. Williamson told students at a traffic training school in Austin, Texas.

"A beautiful woman runs through stop sign and an officer trots over to her, his pad and pencil out," he said.

"This gorgeous female looks up at him sort of helpless-like-you boys know what I mean-and she says, 'Oh, officer, did I do something wrong?" "And the first thing anybody mows, that officer's foot is on the running board and she has hold of the pencil, and that's the end of that ticket.

REAL PEOPLE: We Canadians have for so long been accustomed to thinking of the Royal Family as figureheads, or pawns in the game of the Empire, that it comes with a shock of surprise to many of us to realize that the King and Queen are real live people - human and warm; to know at first hand that the King is a fine man, the Queen a beautiful woman. Since the moment they stepped off the ship at Quebec we have been feeling that here is the genuine article. Instead of a stereotyped tour run off on a dry schedule, their Majesties' visit in the Dominion is being marked by unexpected contacts with ordinary folk, handshakes, exchanges of friendly words between these two human beings (who happen to be royalty) and their fellows.

FOOTHOLD IN SPAIN: The suspicion is growing that, although they didn't make as much noise about it as the Italians, the Nazis' participation in a war on Spanish soil has netted them a nice haul. Spanish Morocco and the Basque country with their iron ore, have become spheres of German commercial interest, exploited by the German businessmen who quickly followed German soldiers into Spain. Gestapo agents, builders and contractors from the Reich have long been on the scene.

Furthermore, in a future war, the Germans may be able to use the guns they have placed on the Spanish territory near the Britishheld Gibraltar; the five submarine bases they have helped to build; the modern airports reputedly constructed near the French border.

PROPHET OF DOOM: We nominate Webb Miller, the noted foreign correspondent, who is accompanying the King and Queen on their tour across Canada, as this week's No. 1 prophet-of-doom. Says Miller (who has covered the World War, the Ethiopian War, the Spanish War, Munich, etc.): "A major war is coming in Europe, barring a miracle. When or where it will come f or no one else knows. When it does come they will slip into it in spite of themselves. The nations seem to be in the position of a person on a high place, afflicted with vertigo, who throws himself over in spite of himself, although desiring to live." (In London, England, they're stocking up on black window blinds for use in air raids, oil lanterns and tinned foods). Yes, Mr. Miller, but a miracle might happen. If Britain, France and Russia could really get together, oh what a day for peace that would be!

THE WEEK' QUESTION: How successfully is the Dominion-Provincial youth-training program now working out in the matter of establishing unemployed Canadian youth in jobs? Answer: Federal Labour Minister Rogers has announced that 401/2 per cent, of the youths completing the government training courses designed to lead to employment have been able to secure

Salesmen, Less Talking Please!

As A Rule You're Much Too Wordy - Six Important Rules To Follow

As a rule, salesmen talk too much, John Wesley Coates, lecturer on business psychology and personality development, declared last week at Windsor Vocational School, opening a course on the science of selling.

Personality is the greatest single factor in successful salesmanship, the speaker said, defining personality as "the ability to interest and influence other people." The speaker listed as six things every salesman, salesmanager, executive, and, in fact, everyone, should know, as follows: (1) Don't try to do all the talking; (2) Never interrupt; (3) Never contradict; (4) During the first part of your interview, ask questions; (5) Find out the prospect's chief objection; and (6) Sell him exclusively on that

The four steps in completing a sale were listed by Mr. Coates as follows: (1) Attracting favorable attention; (2) Creating interest; (3) Arousing desire; and (4) Closing the sale, or "action," the name on the dotted line.

Wait Until Other People Have Gone

To Correct Your Child's Manners-Children Resent Being Spoken To Sharply In the Presence of Strangers

Jane's mother corrected her one day before some relatives. Another time she told Jane not to interrupt when Mrs. Evans, a caller, was speaking.

Mrs. Jones gave Jane a good going-over, eventually, about telling some family affair that was confidential. Jane was worried the minute the word had passed her lips and she was at the point when any reference to it doubled her shame. She was trying to do things right, but the constant correcting she was getting at the wrong moments was making her very un-

She said to her mother, "Mummy, you'd get better results if you waited till we were alone to correct me."

"Why, darling, maybe you are right. I never thought about it." We cannot always wait until the next day, that is sure, when children need instant correcting and even punishment. But it is true, also, that a postponed suggestion, made when the child is less nervous, often gets better results.

Halifex Physician Cancels All Bills Owing Him (Total $21,000) As He Retires In Poor Health

Patients of Dr. K. B. Mahabir had their bills wiped off the Halifax (N. S.) physician's books last week.

Dr. Mahabir announced that, coincident with his withdrawal from practice because of ill-health, he had cancelled the accounts of 342 patients totalling $21,000. These were collectable accounts: previously, he had written off those he regarded as "bad" debts, Dr. Mahabir said.

"I felt it was something of a strain on many people who were really trying to pay," the physician

Dr. Mahabir said he did not care to comment on reports published here a month ago to the effect that he had been left a £50,000 legacy in the will of a man whom he was said to have saved from drowning in Cairo, Egypt, 20 years ago. "I should like it if that rumor died a natural death," he observed.

FISH AIRS The external oxygen supply determines the ability of fish to live in certain waters, which accounts for the reason why each species of fresh water fish tends to occupy only a particular region of the lakes and rivers and why their haunts vary with the season. "We find that the ability of the fish to utilize oxygen in the water is influenced by the amount of carbon dioxide in the water," three scientists from the Edward Martin Biological Laboratory of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, told a recent meeting in Toronto of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

The three biologists, Laurence Irving, Edgar C. Black and V. Safford, reported that "each species of fish has its own characteristic tolerance and the species may be arranged in regular order beginning with the trout as the most sensitive, following with the sucker, perch, sunfish, chain pickerel, bass, shiner, carp, eel and catfish, This suggests that the external oxygen supply determines the ability of the fish to live in certain water."

Men Folk Serve Tea At Church

Just possibly it was a woman's idea-but it was the men who put it over.

When McDougall United Church. Edmonton, decided to hold a tea, it turned into something to write about. Only the preparation of the food fell to the women. The pouring, serving and receiving was conducted by the men. Their wives sat around and grinned and grinned and grinned.

Responding to the call for "pourers" for the tea-first of its kind ever held in the Alberta capital and staged by the church's Men's Association-were Mayor John Fry, 250-pound Chief of Police A. G. Shute, three Alberta cabinet ministers, the city commissioner and several aldermen and a flock of business men, clergymen and other professional men.

Working in 30-minute "shifts" at the serving table, they disposed of 500 gallons of tea, 3,000 sandwiches and 2,000 pieces of cake in four hours. "They did a lovely job." com-
