

Handy Household Hints

To coat food to be fried a golden brown with egg and crumbs is very easy to do, and well worth the effort.

Break an egg into a shallow dish, beat slightly with a fork until the white and yolk are mixed; stir in 2 tablespoons of water. In a second shallow dish put finely rolled dry bread crumbs. Dip the food into the egg mixture, turn until all sides are coated, lift with a fork and hold over the dish until the excess egg has drained off. Dip the egg-coated food into the crumbs and turn until it is evenly covered, then fry.

Savory cabbages with crinkly leaves are the finest quality home garden cabbages.

To cut balls of melon for cocktails and salads with a French cutter, place the cutting edge of the ball cutter against the peeled surface of the fruit or vegetable. With even pressure on the knife, roll from right to left and left to right alternately, so that the knife cuts into the food first on one side and then on the other.

Continue until the food shows through the hole in the back of the cutter. Still exerting pressure on the knife, lift the handle until it is at right angles with the food. Turn the handle completely around in the hand and lift out the ball.

To obtain the professional-looking glaze on linen, it is necessary to use cold starch, and iron while articles are still damp. Now dip a piece of flannel in some French chalk, and rub this smoothly on each article, and then with a piece of white curd soap is rubbed over the chalk. Lastly the articles are ironed on the wrong side only with a moderately hot iron; when done they have the appearance of new articles.

Fire guards which have been used throughout the winter can be made into pretty screens to hide other unsightly empty fireplaces. Embroider a piece of linen crash, or use up a remnant of curtain material, and tack it to the front of the guard. This can be easily removed for washing, and can be stored when you want to use the guard for the fire again.

To avoid unpleasant cooking odors, strong-flavored vegetables are best cooked tied in parchment cooking paper.

By the way, what do you do with your old table napkins? We discovered a friend of ours throwing hers away the other day and told her she was foolish. If you sew a loop of tape or a curtain ring to one corner and hang it by the sink, you have a new and excellent glass cloth!

To make fine white bread crumbs quickly it is a good idea to put the soft part of a stale loaf into a clean muslin bag, tie it firmly at the top, and gently rub it for a few minutes between the hands, when the crumbs will be fine enough for any purpose.

Save the water in which you boil the onions for dinner and use it for cleaning the gilt frames of your pictures or mirrors, while for the mirrors themselves, and the windows too, methylated spirit can be used with safety.

Fall Fur Fashions

Brown Furs Seem Favorite in Fashions

Brown furs are the big news in mistletoe sales of fur coats for winter 1939 and 1940. Gray and black are in the picture, of course, but safari brown Alaska sealskin, saffron-dyed fish, sheared beaver, sheared raccoon, mink, blended muskrat, nutria and, in the luxury class, mink, beaver martens and sable are the headlines.

Just as brown is the news, variety is the keynote of every collection—variety in pelts used, variety in silhouettes, variety in sleeve, collar and neckline treatments. Silhouettes vary from short-and-boxy to fitted-and-flared, with all manner of casual, swinging and straight-hanging types in between.

Use Pelts Like Silk. New processes and craftsmanship have made it possible for the designer of fur coats to express himself as freely and imaginatively in fur as he can in silk and wool materials.

Almost every fur now can be draped, pleated, even shirred. Heavy, long-haired pelts, such as raccoon, have been shorn of their bulk by effective reducing treatments which make them marvelously lightweight, yet as warm as formerly.

Furthermore, if you are far-minded at all, this is indeed the summer to buy. Those right at the source of the fur industry agree that prices of all kinds of pelts are considerably lower than they have been in many a season.

CHAPTER I

Leave The Door Open, That's A Dear

The soap sld over the edge of the tub and across the bathroom floor, three feet beyond the reach of the tub's lovely occupant.

"Damn!" said Cilly, (Priscilla, to you, Miss Priscilla Pierce, of the late Bensonhurst Pierces.)

She slithered down to the edge of the tub and reached again. With two strong fingers she grasped the soap, only to have it slide another yard toward the door.

"Damn!" she said again. Then to herself: "If I have to get out of this tub, I'm out for good."

Somewhere in the night a church clock struck. Cilly listened, counting the strokes. "Twelve o'clock," she murmured. "I'm going to bed."

She remembered that she had a full morning's work ahead of her the next day, it she was to finish that Harvey brief by noon. And she was never her best on Monday morning. Tomorrow would be no exception.

She jumped out of the tub, rescued the slippery soap and returned it to its cubicle above the tub. Then with a large Turkish towel she rubbed her tall slim body until it just glistened.

"If Amy Kerr had one iota of sense," she was thinking all the while, "she wouldn't have suggested another rubber of bridge at 11 o'clock. Nor would she be up on the roof now airing her blue dress! Airing her dress, my grandmother. She's never been so fussy before. What made her want to go up on the roof at 12 o'clock?"

Cilly grabbed her pyjamas from the hook on the bathroom door and jumped into them unceremoniously. Amy might at least have realized that it was nerve-racking to have the door unlocked when one was taking a bath. But tonight Amy was certainly inconsiderate.

"I won't be a minute, Cilly—I'm just going up on the roof to air this blue dress so that I can wear it tomorrow. It smells like a gasoline station now... Leave the door open, that's a dear."

Tommyrot!

Well, it certainly was a long minute. More like 20.

Cilly went into the bedroom they shared together and sat down at the fringed dressing table. This was the moment of the daily hair-brushing—100 strokes. It wasn't all accident that Cilly's dull auburn hair shone so richly.

Seven, eight, nine, ten... Just a minute, to air this blue dress. Tommyrot! Cilly was thoroughly annoyed at Amy Kerr tonight. And not a little annoyed at herself for being such a jealous fool. It wasn't as if Amy was a different person by nature. She wasn't. She was a peach. In the two months they had shared the apartment, Cilly and Amy had grown as close as sisters.

Cilly had been doubtful at first about taking a strange girl in to share her home, but she had never regretted doubling up with Amy Kerr. And with expenses just about cut in half, they were already planning a trip to the West Indies that winter. That is if nothing happened in the meantime.

Seven, eight, nine, twenty...

If nothing happened in the meantime. Actually, Cilly was thinking: "If Jim doesn't insist on getting married before then." He'd been on the point of it a dozen times, Cilly knew, but something always held him back.

"Oh, Cilly, darling!"—it was Jim who had christened her "Cilly" in place of the prim and pure "Priscilla" for her great-grandmother—"Oh, Cilly, if I could only run off with you right this very day... you do love me, don't you, darling? You will wait for me, no matter what happens?"

Wait for him! Hadn't she waited 27 years for someone exactly like Jim Kerrigan? If she waited another thousand years, would she ever find anyone else so utterly dear, so thoughtful, so tender?

Seven, eight, nine, forty... He'd never said exactly what held him back, but Cilly had understood. It was his new job. He had only been in New York a little over six months; he had to make good before he could ask a girl to marry him. She could well afford to be patient.

Or could she?

Where-Have-You-Been-All-My-Life Look

For the first time since she had known Jim, she felt a little twinge of uncertainty. These past few months it had been just Jim and she—just the two of them together. Dancing at the French Casino. Swimming at Jones Beach. Leaping the loop at Coney Island. Cooking hot dogs over a camp-fire at Hill-side Park. Holding hands at the Paramount. Stealing a kiss down stairs in the vestibule... Just two people in all New York. Cilly Pierce and Jim Kerrigan.

Until tonight. Until this very evening when she had suggested to Amy that they invite their respective beaux in for a quiet Sunday evening. "So we can all get to know each other better," she had said to Amy. "Four people can have so much more fun together than just two."

Well, they certainly got to know each other better. Jim and Amy, at any rate. You'd have thought they'd known each other all their lives. The way Amy's eyes lighted up when she introduced them... the way she've-you-been-all-my-life look that Jim gave Amy...

Seven, eight, nine, eighty... It was just that she couldn't have gone for Amy's date in the same spirit. Harry Hutchins. A loud-mouthed, conceited fool. The sort who can always tell the other fellow how to play bridge. A wise guy.

Cilly marveled that a girl like Amy could have stood his company for one evening. Amy was highly attractive—a girl with charm and poise and good breeding. Surely she could see through the bluff that was Harry Hutchins.

But apparently she didn't. To all appearances, she was completely gone on him. Why, if two days passed without her hearing from him, she'd call him at his hotel. It made Cilly mad.

Once she remarked about it to Amy, not that she had any right to comment. But Amy was such a

Children Like Simple Clothes

Sunsets and Jackets Good For Hot Weather

In picking playtime garments for hot weather, the sunsuit remains the most comfortable choice for little children. For other everyday purposes the sun ensemble is equally a summer stand-by. The matching dress or jacket to go over the sunsuit is useful when afternoons turn cool and for dress-up occasions as dinner, or going visiting with mother.

Clothes designers and home economics watch children at play to learn how new patterns look and fit, how materials and workmanship stand up in this normal wear-and-tear and how they launder, for they certainly must launder!

For Children Who Dress Themselves

Raglan shoulders, seats with plenty of length and spread, looseness or fullness in all garments, rather than clothes just too big, all are desirable from the standpoint of the clothes authorities. Too-big clothes can be as uncomfortable as too-small garments. For children beginning to do things for themselves, it is wise to have garments that cannot be put on hindsdo-foremost, that have plaquets in front and easy-to-manage fastenings.

Canadian Black Lamb Given To Princesses

Lamb "Lusitania" Sent to Regent's Park Zoo

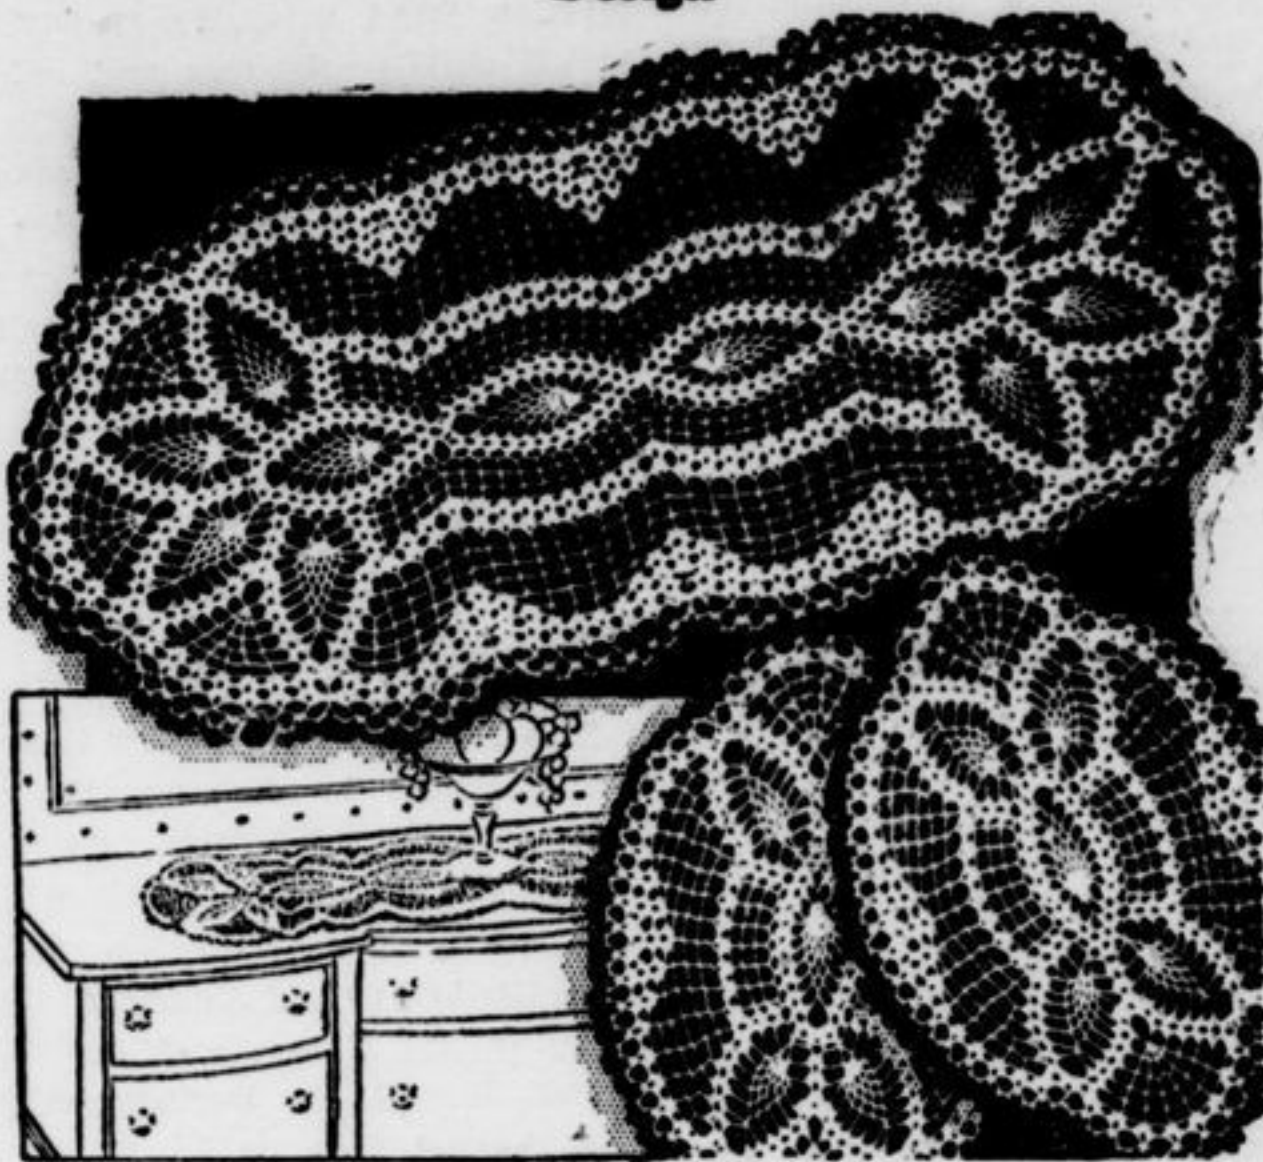

"Miss Lusitania," a sleek Canadian black lamb who eats cake and drinks coffee although she is only four months old, arrived aboard the Alaunia last month to visit Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose but wound up in the pet's corner of the Regent's Park zoo.

"Miss Lusitania," a gift to the Princesses from Mrs. Ross Brown, 80-year-old war widow of Kirkland Lake, Ont., landed at the Surrey Commercial docks and was taken to the zoo in a truck where she was delivered in the name of the princesses at the request of Queen Elizabeth.

The octogenarian war widow addressed the lamb to Buckingham Palace bearing a collar on which the name "Miss Lusitania" was inscribed and the words "I am a royal lamb." But the Queen beloved of the children's corner at the zoo was a more appropriate place for her daughters' new pet.

good-hearted soul; she'd never realize when someone was giving her a raw deal.

"Let him chase you," Cilly had said. "There's more zest to a man when you keep him guessing."

But Amy had just shrugged. "Don't worry about me, Cilly," she replied. "You don't understand this affair between Harry and me."

It would be terrifying... I. No Cilly didn't understand it. But she understood Harry Hutchins. Only too well. He was the answer to every maiden's prayer—at least he thought so. And poor Amy was just another girl who had fallen prey to his deadly charm.

Cilly knew that Harry had other interests. In greener fields. It was no secret that Harry Hutchins was making a heavy play for Gloria Harmon, whose father had left her a string of chain stores. The Brooklyn rotogravure section's printed photographs of them together—at the races, at the smartest supper clubs in Manhattan, at the Harmon estate on Long Island. Even tonight, he had boasted of spending the previous week-end "down at Harmony Hall."

But all this went over poor Amy's head. Either she had not a bit of jealousy in her makeup, or she had a forlorn hope that in time she could win her precious Harry back.

Seven, eight, nine, one hundred... Cilly put the brush down. Perhaps that was it. Perhaps Amy had been so especially sweet to Jim this evening just to make Harry jealous. Cilly couldn't blame her for that.

However, that didn't explain this going up on the roof. And spending half an hour up there.

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight, not unless the moon rode high in a cloudless sky. Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

New Household Gadgets

Zipper Table Cloth
Several of the stores are still thinking of things to give a gloss to Summer living. One of these, a cloth for umbrella tables, should be a godsend to outdoor eaters. It has a hole in the middle and an inconspicuous zipper closing. Pockets at each corner for napkins keep everything under control.

Out-of-Doors Ash Tray
There is a new ash-tray, large but not too functional-looking, which can alternate as a flower vase. It has five petals, and in the interstices are short grooves, where cigarettes can rest safely without getting mixed up with the debris at the bottom.

New Egg-Beater
For people who feel that they should get behind a shower curtain before attempting to beat eggs, there is a new egg-beater which eliminates splashing and involves practically no labor. It is small and works on a lever system by merely pushing the top shaft up and down. A weighted disk keeps the beater in place so that there is no danger of its suddenly zooming out of the bowl. The gadget can handle as much as a pint of cream, four eggs or a box of gelatin.

TABLE TALKS

Picnic Days and Sandwich Demands

Summer days are passing all too swiftly and no one wishes to miss any opportunity for the picnic or the lawn and porch supper—or any other repast which will take one to the glorious outdoors. Immediately arises a necessity for the simplest hospitality for the homemaker and the hostess. Nothing is more popular than the sandwich, whether for the functions just named or for the school lunch box which mother will soon be packing once more. With these thoughts in mind I offer you the following suggestions hoping they will be practical and add to your variety.

- Cheese and Pimento Filling
 - 1/2 cup butter placed in double boiler
 - 3 eggs
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 3 level teaspoons mustard
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 tablespoon cornstarch
 - 1 cup vinegar
 - 1 package cream cheese
 - 2 green peppers and 1 pimento
 - 1/2 cup sour cream
 - 1/2 teaspoon cayenne
- Beat eggs well, add sugar, mustard, salt, cornstarch and cayenne. Mix very thoroughly with egg beater, add to the melted butter in double boiler. Stir constantly until the mixture thickens then add the cream cheese cut up in pieces, stirring until cheese is evenly mixed. Remove from heat; add the sour cream whipped, the peppers and pimento. If not for immediate use add the cream just before using. This will keep indefinitely. For variation add chopped mint or parsley instead of pimento and pepper. Parsley and mint are also better added to the filling just before using.

- Peanut Butter Sandwich Filling
 - 1 cup peanut butter
 - 1 cup black currant jam
 - 1 cup chopped dates (chopped very fine)
 - 1 cup blanched almonds chopped fine.
- Mix first three ingredients very thoroughly, then add nuts.
- Cucumber Sandwich Filling
 - 1 cup chopped cucumber
 - 1/2 cup onion
 - 3 tablespoons sweet pepper
 - 1/2 teaspoon cayenne
 - 1 tablespoon thick salad dressing.
- Chop the cucumber and onion and drain well. Add the seasoning and dressing.
- Cottage Cheese Fillings
 - Cucumber and cottage cheese, 3 parts cottage cheese to one of cucumber.
 - Strawberry jam and cottage cheese, 2 cups cheese to 1/2 cup jam.
 - Pineapple (shredded) nuts and cottage cheese, 2 cups cheese, 1/2 cup pineapple mixed well. Add chopped nuts, almonds being preferred.

To add to attractiveness cut sandwiches in various shades. In single or open sandwiches, which are best spread with a paste-like filling garnishing is very important. Have ready on squares of waxed paper, chopped parsley, mint, nuts and chopped egg yolk. If garnish desired for a complete covering place the whole piece of the chopped garnish desired, if just edges dip the edges turning as it is garnished. A dot of red currant or any jelly to the centre of the open sandwich adds much to attractiveness and appetizing appeal.
