

Rare Collection Of Fabric Mosaics

Mrs. Mary Ireland Invents Unique Type Of Pictures

Most original exhibition in Bond street is the collection of fabric mosaics made by Mrs. Mary Ireland, says a writer in the London Daily Sketch. Based on the technique of stained glass, rare and beautiful silks are intercut in the same way and set in a paste on wood. Faces are painted in water-color on flesh-tinted crepe-de-chino.

Formerly Stained Glass Artist Mrs. Ireland, formerly an artist in stained glass, became seriously ill through inhaling fumes of hydrofluoric acid used in this work and had to give up her job. The idea of her present pictures came during convalescence. Now she lectures on antique silks, has been filmed and televised. Recently an inquiry came from India, to know whether she would give the writer a postal instruction course.

Mrs. Ireland, besides hunting second-hand shops throughout Great Britain in search of materials for her pictures, also collects rare embroideries and fabrics as a hobby.

Blondes predominate in her work, because it is so difficult to find a dark material which gives the effect of brunette hair. Gold brocade and yellow satin render perfectly the sheen of fair curls.

Mrs. Ireland's work is so technically difficult that up to now she has escaped imitators.

Outlook For Canada Good

Current Survey of Canadian Business Good

In general, the business outlook in Canada is brighter in the view of a writer in the Financial Post, who says in part:

"Despite persistence of irregularity and sluggishness in some fields current survey of Canadian business shows improvement predominating, and the outlook brightening. The inevitable 'if-now' qualification has become the chief if not the only cloud of importance on the horizon.

The remaining spottiness that business is now hopeful of clearing up is reflected by statistics available for the first half of the year. They indicate that compared with the same period of 1938:

Employment generally is improving, though the average for the year to date is still below last year.

Newspaper production and exports are higher.

Iron and steel production are lower.

Automobile output is down.

Total exports are higher, while imports are down.

These are only a few of the business indicators that might be taken, but they affect the irregular course of the recovery."

Children And Their Culture

You Can't Shove Culture Down A Child's Throat

A lady was trying to improve the cultural life of the town's children. The committee had decided on a play, first, and then an opera.

She said, "We will get them to come to the play, and they will be willing to come to the next performance. We will shove it down their throats."

Now don't shake your heads. This is a common idea about educating our children to the better things of life. How to get the dose "down their throats" is a matter of planning wherever the attempt is being made.

Every parent wants the children to appreciate the classical. That is, to know about good music, fine art, the best books and so on. And what do we do about it? We tiptoe up to the child, catch him from behind and say, "Now, here is something you may not like at the first, but down it goes."

In doing so we are not a bit different from the lady who tried to get her audience interested in fine music by way of a dull opera completely over their heads.

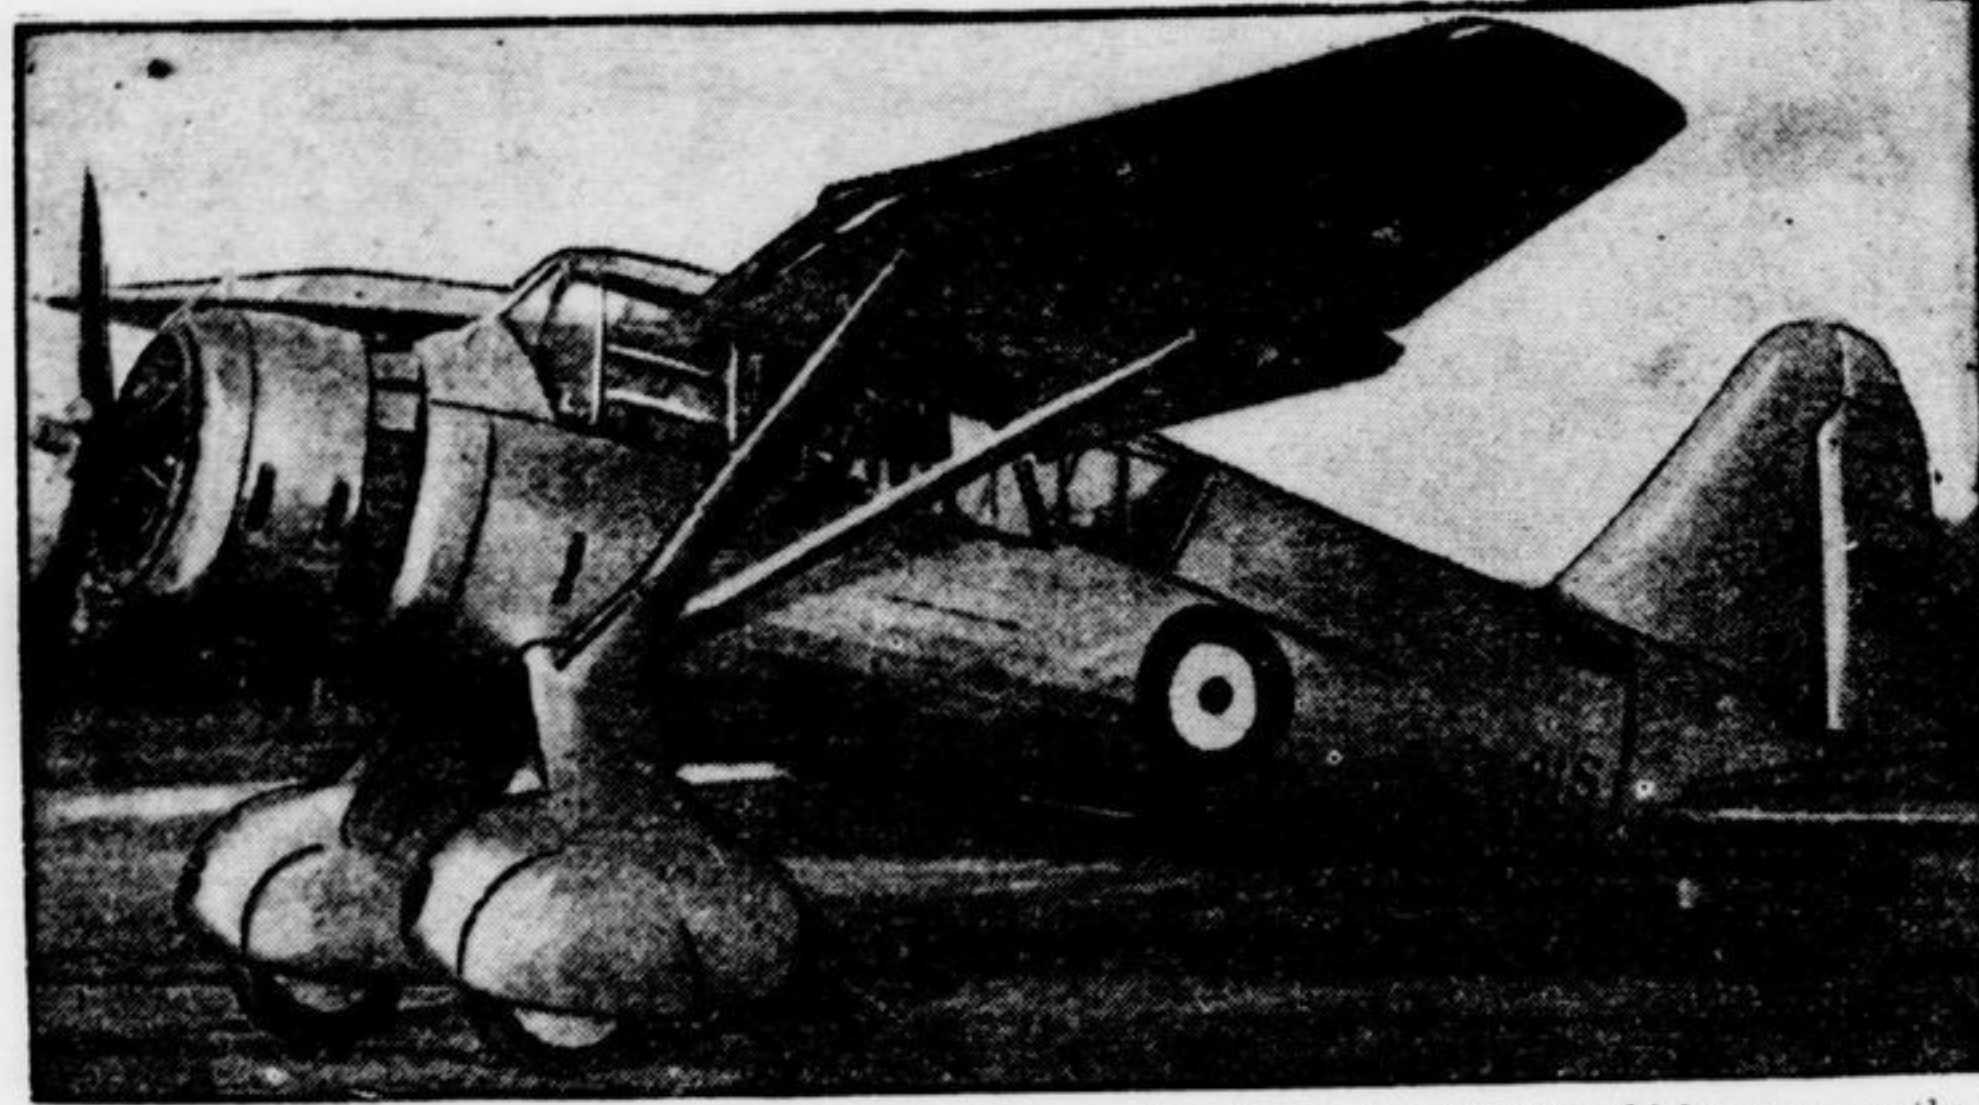

It is really necessary to include a few of the cultures in a growing child's diet. The point is that we cannot do so by shoving them down his throat. The approach must be made at first through the feeling.

A child must like all books and love to read before he will devour beautiful writing merely for beauty's sake. His first association with books give pleasure. But you "shove" dull books at him, or too-complicated or too-old ones at all and he may balk at all reading for good.

It is the same with music and with art.

A folding lap board, placed on the arms of the chair, makes a handy work table for paring vegetables, for writing or sewing.

Canadian-Built Fighter Is Undergoing Initial Tests

The R.C.A.F. will soon be augmented by 28 Westland Lysander planes, the first of which was recently tested at Malton Airport, Toronto. The planes are being built by the National Steel Car Company and are designed to assist ground troops in the time of war as well as to carry a load of bombs. The first of the 28 planes to roll off the finish line is shown ABOVE, just before undergoing its initial tests.

NEWS PARADE ...

PATROLLERS PATROLLED: Reminds us of the old rhyme about the dog that had fleas and the fleas had other fleas to bite 'em ("so on ad infinitum")—this newest wrinkle in Ontario's highway traffic regulations. The Attorney-General's department has divided the Province into three zones—Eastern, Central, Western—with a specially qualified Provincial patrol officer, rank of sergeant, as supervisor over all the motorcycle officers in each zone. So while the cop watches you to see that you don't go over 50, a super-cop is watching him to see that he does his duty.

A NATIVE RETURNS: Canada has few authors of note who have made any stir beyond our shores, and of these a great many are disposed to live in the United States or abroad. A double "welcome home" is therefore extended to writer Mazo de la Roche, creator of the famed "Jalna" books who, after a long sojourn in England and the U.S., has come back to live in Toronto. Her return boosts tremendously our literary self-respect.

While we think of it, did you know that the little church high on a hill at Erinville, Ontario, is the church attended by the White Oak family in the "Jalna" novels?

BEYOND DANZIG: Dr. Hans Simon, former German diplomat, and now a member of the New York School for Social Research, declared last week that Danzig is simply the stepping-stone for a Nazi policy which looks such further than the banks of the Vistula or the Polish Corridor—towards world domination. Reduction of Poland to a state of vassalage is doubtless next on the program; a big clean-up in the Balkans (Jugoslavia, Rumania, etc.); maybe another clean-up in the Baltic, then the incapacitation of France.

PROPAGANDA JITTERS: Italy and Germany are proving that it's pretty well possible to control the press of a country, to have nothing printed in the newspapers which isn't to the advantage of the existing government. Radio is a great deal harder to handle but the propaganda bosses through the medium of the Gestapo, in Germany for instance, clamp down inexorably on owners of receiving sets who tune in broadcasts from beyond the country's borders.

Art, the movies, magazines, theatre, are similarly muzzled. But one channel that cannot be controlled, so far, at any rate, by Fascist machinery, is the postal service. Through the medium of the letter-box, Hitler and Mussolini may yet meet defeat.

Now Stephen King-Hall, British publicist, has launched a highly organized correspondence service which sends letters to as many as 50,000 private individuals in Germany, giving them true news of the international situation and a picture of Hitler as the rest of the world sees him.

The letters are passed by the recipients into many other hands... and Dr. Goebbels a headache!

The new hair style decrees beat the drum loudly for curls and more curls and to make easy the problem of keeping her myriad rolls intact milady may now have the aid of a new hair-grooming device which serves every hair setting purpose. It's a new comb designed to comb, curl and dress the hair in several easy motions. It has a stationary comb at one end for combing the hair prior to curling it and a movable comb at the other to curl the hair.

Heat Dries Your Hair

Milady's Locks Require Care In Summer

Your hair is suffering from too much sun.

It needs attention. Do give it a proper brushing. Remember that every head of hair that ever was needs five minutes' brushing morning and evening. Don't sigh about it. Don't think that this means the end of your wave and set—because it doesn't. Brushing distributes the natural grease through the hair, and that means you will keep your wave and set a great deal longer. If you deny this natural grease to the hair, it goes like straw, and you know what happens then. It doesn't keep its wave for two seconds. It sticks out here and it goes like hay there, and secretly you are rather thankful that you can't see the back of it, because Heaven only knows what that is looking like!

Use a good lotion. Buy yourself a hair tonic.

For the same being wash your hair with yolks of eggs. Use plenty of water for the rinsing, because it is this meanness on the water that makes such an enormous difference to a head of hair.

ONTARIO OUTDOORS

By VIC BAKER

REEL INFORMATION

One of the questions that eventually pops up at all discussions surrounding the art of angling is "who invented the fishing reel?" As a matter of fact crude reels were used over 300 years ago. At that time within two feet of the end of the rod, there was a hole made to put in a wind, turned with a barrel to gather up and loose line.

The earliest type of reel with which we are familiar, consisted of a spool with handle riveted directly to the spool. These reels were made of brass and were without click or drag. Reels of this type are still on the market and retail at about one dollar.

The multiplying reel was an American invention, introduced by a Kentucky watchmaker about 1834. Black bass fishermen everywhere still favour the original style reel, with few refinements. Innovations such as free spool, level winding and anti-back-lash devices now are built into these reels, but the general construction remains the same.

Also extensively developed have been the big game fish reels. These reels are now built in sizes large enough to hold 1,000 yards of 39-thread line. They are equipped with handles that turn one way only, and adjustable drags that can be controlled by the angler. We have come quite a way since the first primitive reel was lashed to a rod.

One railway in England is building 90 new engines, including 20 of the Coronation Scot type.

VOICE of the PRESS

A FINE BODY OF MEN

While of course, they are not possessed of what would undoubtedly be the invaluable gift of ubiquitousness, Ontario's highway traffic police are, on the whole, as fine a body of men as one can find engaged in similar work anywhere.

Their work is not of a sensational nature. Unless the circumstances are exceptional, the most serious criminals with whom they deal are motorists who transgress the provisions of the Highway Traffic Act. When they are called upon to display courage they show that they can tackle anything, from a bank bandit to a murderer.

And it is to their credit that the highways of Ontario are clean and well kept, in the traffic sense. There is much reckless and negligent driving. There is much foolishness and stupidity, but it always occurs—or nearly always—when there is no officer in sight.—Guelph Mercury.

AN OLD TUNE

So many men grab the stool when there is a piano to be moved.—Brandon Sun.

CRAZE FOR LIMELIGHT

It is related that Mussolini loves to be photographed for pictures to be published in the Italian papers and that accredited camera men are at liberty to take snaps at any time they see him. Thus another angle is afforded of his craze to be in the limelight.—Brantford Expositor.

WHY?

When England was of the same population that Canada now has, she had a great literature. We have very little, and not of the highest class.—Catholic Record.

Ask for BEE HIVE

REG'LAR FELLERS—Advertising Pays

Books And You

BY ELIZABETH EEDY

THE OWNLEY INN

By Joseph C. Lincoln and Freeman Lincoln

Shades of salt-spray and Cape Cod folks saunter across the pages of a new and satisfactory puzzle story by the father-and-son team already celebrated as the authors of "Blair's Attic" a mystery of a season or two ago. Once you have read a "Lincoln" story you will look for more... and more.

Who stole the valuable copy of "The New England Primer" (1749 edition) from the strongroom of the Knowlton Library of American Literature? Who killed the Man of Mystery on Sepatonk Island, and was he the crook? Which one of the islanders is an unscrupulous collector? Sleuthing away to solve these mysteries we find Dick Clarke, a Bainbridge youth engaged to Anne Francis, and Seth Ownley, proprietor of the Island Inn.

The plot unfolds with plenty of intrigue, love, native types of people—in fact everything you expect to find in a "Lincoln" book.

Hands will not suffer from household work if they are liberally smeared beforehand with a good cream or lotion? In this way the hands will be soft and white after the subsequent washing with soap and water. Fingers and nails stained with vegetable parings or gardening should be rubbed with a lemon cut in half. Dig the nails well inside the centre of the lemon.

A Stamp Story

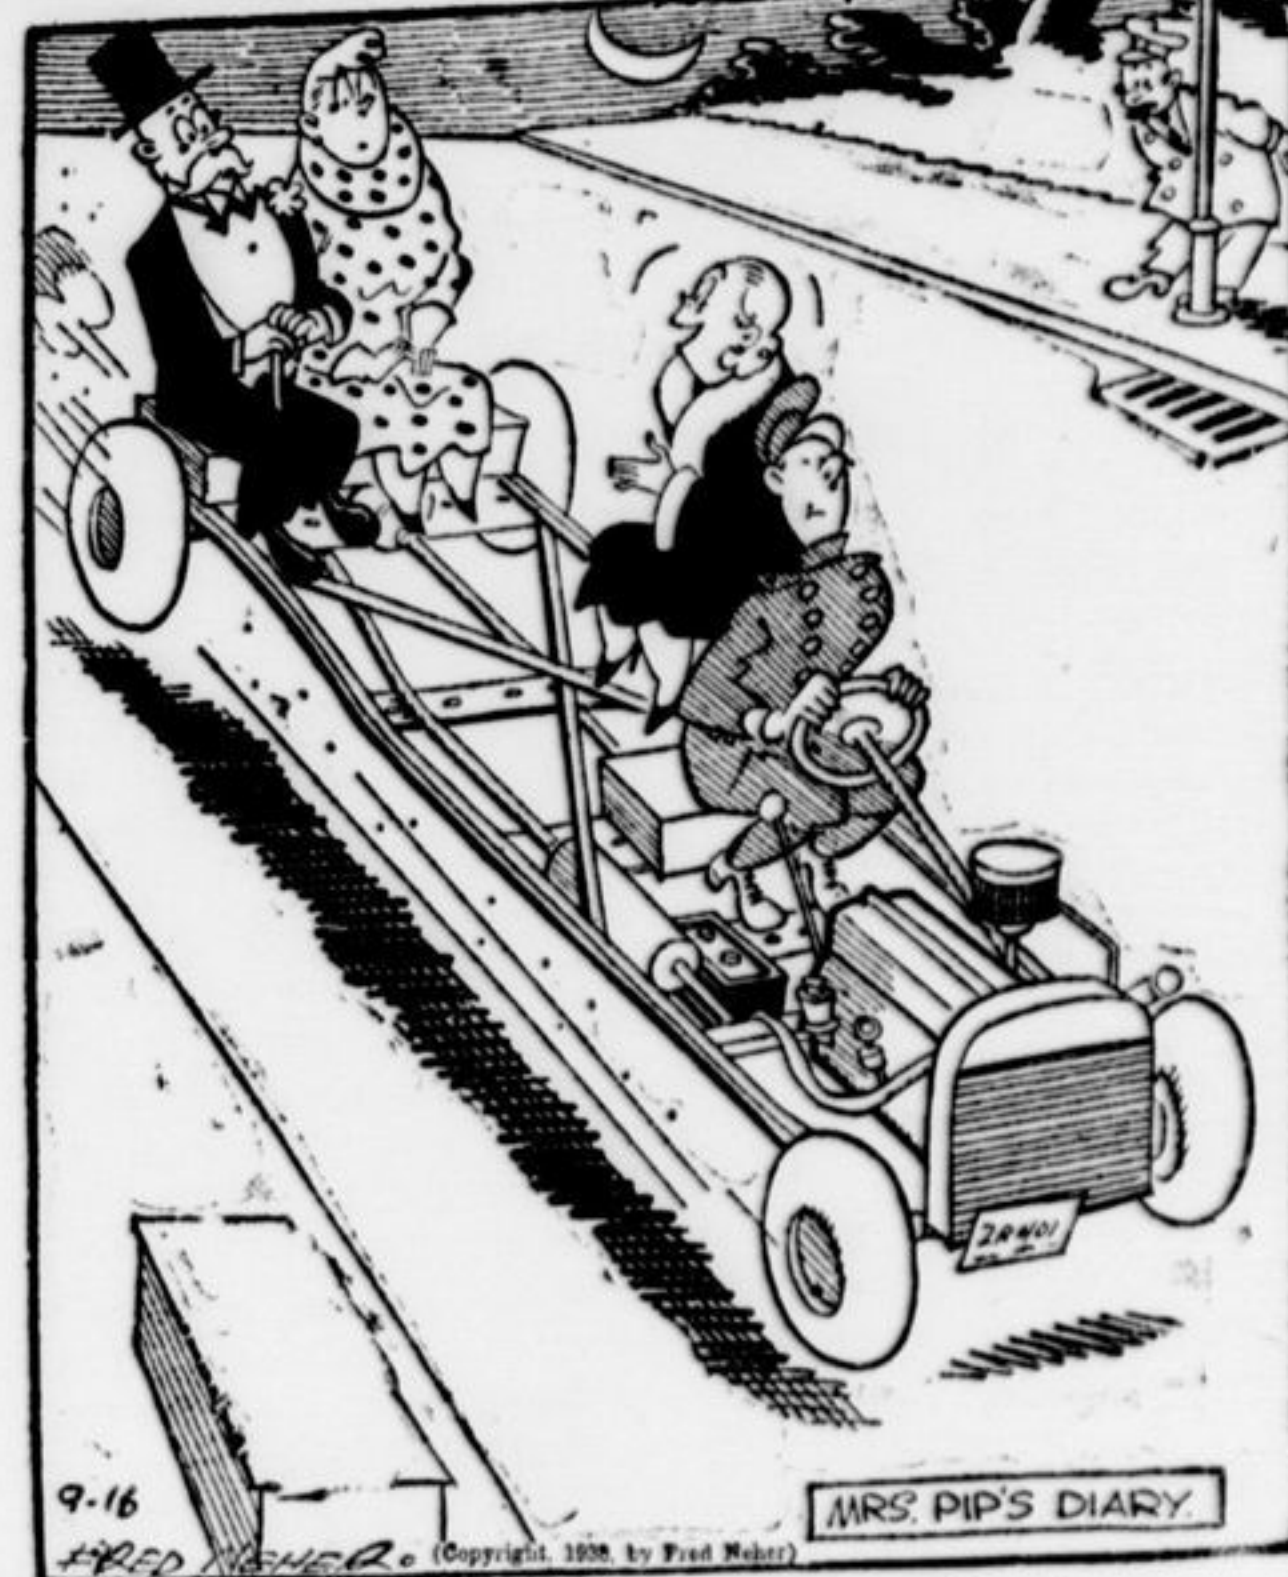

A Woman Lost Her Temper And Found An Idea

Even losing one's temper may be put to a practical use. We owe the facility with which we stamp our letters today to such an event.

A woman, being angry with her husband once stopped her sewing in order to "rub it in" more effectively, and kept pricking a straight line with her needle on a pattern book lying on the table, then angrily she tore it along the line of the pin pricks.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

By Fred Neher

The TORONTO STAR PRESENTS 5 Great Exhibits at the CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION

The big attraction of this year's Canadian National Exhibition... in the National Industrial Building... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

Color Movies — The Royal Tour
The thrilling scenes you witnessed when the King and Queen visited Canada... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

Life Size Royal Visit Photos
In a great many cases star cameramen got closer to the King and Queen than the public at large... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

See Television in Operation
Television... You've been about it read about it. Few people in Toronto have seen television in operation... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

See Photographs Wired
Modern newspapers... The Toronto Daily Star... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

Broadcasting a Newspaper
Facsimile is the transmission... through the ether... see separate exhibits... such as on the factory of the Toronto Star can present. A place you will want to visit is the "Free" exhibits... where art and science combine to entertain and inform you. Free exhibits... open from 10 in the morning until 10 at night.

The Holy Land (in tabular) — Entrance Graphic Arts Bldg. ROYAL FAMILY'S PHOTO — Entrance Graphic Arts Bldg. CHILDREN'S ZOO — Lock of Fine Arts Building.

Be sure TO VISIT THE STAR AT THE "EX"

By GENE BYRNES

