UNIVERSITY EXHIBIT

Western Fair, Sept. 11-16, '39

One of the most attractive features at the Western Fair in 1937 and 1938 was the UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN ONTARIO exhibit on the second floor at the east end of the Manufacturers' building. Thousands of people visited the exhibit and found it intensely interesting.

It will be in place again this year in an enlarged and improved form. Do not miss it.

Young people who are looking forward to a university career should not fail to see this exhibit.

A FACT A WEEK ABOUT CANADA

PAPER CONTAINERS

Wooden boxes and barrels are not so common around the home as they used to be. That is the impression the man of the house gets when he is looking for kindling in the late fall months, before the fire is finally built never to go out, if possible, until the break-up comes. Looking for kindling, he is confronted with an amazing array of paper boxes, most of them corrugated.

Some of the bigger ones may be of wood, but here again there is a new technique. They are bound with wire rivetted to the thin planking. They are quite difficult to detach. Before the wire binding came into being plain wood with short nails were the vogue, and there was not much difficulty. Today even the fruit boxes and baskets have become less easy to crush under foot and throw into the furnace.

The paper containers are everywhere. We use them as drinking cups, and have overcome mostly the good old dipper habit. It may not have been hygienic enough to satisfy the doctors but there was something friendly about it. There was plenty of romance in going to the well, when just the right maid was ready to accompany the carrier of the wooden pail.

We are getting away from these old things at a fast clip. The output of paper boxes and bags has a factory value of over $30,000,000, roughly speaking nearly $3 per capita. One-third of the lot were corrugated boxes and one-fifth of them folding boxes. Paper clothes are in the offing but that is another story.

TYPHOID FEVER

The recent appearance in Hamilton, of seven cases of typhoid fever emphasizes what an improvement there has been in public health in the last quarter century. It is not so many years ago that seven cases at one time would not have been considered an "epidemic", whereas today with typhoid fever almost wiped out, that number causes alarm.

In 10 years deaths from typhoid fever in Canada have decreased 72 per cent.

In connection with the present Hamilton outbreak among women all employed in the same factory, tests are being made to locate the cause of the disease. One supposition is that a woman, not herself ill, is a carrier and this has recalled the famous case of Mary Mallon ("Typhoid Mary") of New York, the first typhoid carrier ever identified. While possessing a robust body, she was teeming with potential death and, being a cook, she spread typhoid germs to great numbers of people. After her identification as the cause of the epidemics which resulted in many deaths she was detained in an institution. She fought for her freedom, obtained it and then under an assumed name, persisted in handling food in two hospitals — again with fatal results. When these epidemics of 1910 were traced to this carrier, she was provided with a laboratory job at North Brother Island, where she subsequently died.

POETS' CORNER

WAR'S SACRIFICE

What is war, and what's the price? That men must pay and sacrifice; Themselves are not all, their soul's despair, O what a burden we are forced to bear.

It's a horrible scene that we must face But friend be ready, accept God's grace; For wars like these, are not our plea, O Saviour guide us on with Thee..

And then at last soldiers say goodbye, That means a lot to you and I; Keep brave hearts we must journey on, Till life flickers out with the dying sun.

Mothers' sons are wounded there, O what anguish; O what despair; Hear the crackling bullets fly, Smoke and debris fills the sky.

Surely there's a God who dwells, In His Heaven amidst such perils; But alas: the years have flown, A weary soul comes home alone.

So from the cradle to the grave, Its a world of turmoil, we must be brave; Our own destiny we must fashion, Till our works are near completion.

And then at last to worlds unknown, We soar away; we shall be shown; What an honor if it's Heaven's gate, No more sorrow; no more hate.

J. E. Stafford, Durham, Ont.

YOUR JOB AND OPPORTUNITY

Here are a few suggestions on how to be successful today—simply, plain advice by Lowell Thomas' Commentary magazine that will help any ambitious youngster to a better job:

1. Get started anywhere. Don't be too choosy about picking a job these days. Take what you can get.

2. Remember, this job has some hidden opportunity which you can dig up, fashion into some thing worthwhile.

3. Be interested primarily in the business. Don't let your employer feel that your personal interests come first.

4. Be punctual. While nothing may be said about coming in late or leaving early, or about extra long lunch hours, such actions do not help out.

5. Take time off only when absolutely essential. Frequent sick leaves stand in the way of advancement.

6. If you have a complaint, either take it to the proper superior or keep it to yourself. Don't speak behind the boss' back. Such tales have a nasty way of getting back to him.

7. If you have any ideas, write them out and submit them to your superior. Ideas build business. Yours may help.

8. Be patient these trying times in the matter of salary increases. Your employer may be having a tough struggle. Stand by him. He will more than make it up to you when things brighten.

9. Stop envying the other fellow's job. Concentrate on making the most of yours.

Durham Fair Was Best for Year

With a fair brand of weather the first time in several years, the Durham Fair last Friday drew 2,000 citizens from town and county who pronounced it "a good fair" with exception, to our knowledge. The co-operation of the Durham Men's Association of Durham, staging the Amateur program was a potent factor in drawing and retaining the crowds who came. The program was carried on with an interruption, all afternoon with a city enough to suit all.

The day broke warm and bright and while rain threatened at several times during the afternoon, overcast skies retained their nature, and the gentle breeze prevailing made the temperature most comfortable. About 5.35 a sprinkling occurred, (maybe to maintain Durham's record of rain a Fair!) but so slight, that it never noticed it.

At 1.30 the children of Durham and Hutton Hill schools led by Band paraded to the grounds, to admitted free.

Exhibits both in the hall and stock classes, were of excellent quality, and upheld the high standard of Durham Fairs. Grain smaller showing, due to the date, but roots, vegetables and were well up to average. C. C. pier and J. Blasing carried off prizes in roots, and many in vegetables, while R. Winch also cooed. Butter was good, but only 8-cent entries.

A new feature was work of end grades in Durham and Glenelg schools. In rope and plasticine modelling, 100 pupils carried off the prizes. Durham students in Model Schools Grounds and Community Park, took Weeds, and Still Life, schools shared in knot tying.

In apples, plums and peaches Loughheed of Collingwood topped a sweep the boards. Geo. Bell, Edg e and Bert Barber captured some of the apple prizes.

There was a beautiful floral play, the exhibitors being Mrs. McDonald, Mrs W. Clark, Mrs J. Allan, Jas Milligan, Mrs J. N. Arthur Edge, Mrs J. Newell Whitmore, Mrs Hymeyman, J. ilton, Mrs N. Whitmore, Gerbo Leen.

Baking exhibits were tempting ever, with keen competition. Ladies' work saw the steady exhibitors in this class—Mrs Mrs Nichol, Mrs Champ and Rattle, win most of the awards.

The outstanding hall attraction was the Women's Institute or Club exhibit, where eight societies had attractive displays. This year Institute took first with 76; South Glenelg 2nd with 76; 2nd, 73 1/2; Allan Park 4th, 68 1/2; Sunnyview 5th, 65; Eden Hill 6th, 60 1/2; Aberdeen 7th, and Rocky 8th, 51 1/2.

The junior farmers of Glenelg exhibited on their potato. There were ten entries and the winners were Arthur Newell, Anderson, Daniel Edge, Ellison David Aijoe, Allister Aijoe.
