

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
CLOUD PICTURES

Clouds add much to the beauty of the sky. Include them in every picture. It's easy to do.

It seems that too often we forget all about the fleecy white clouds, which add so much to the attractiveness and beauty of a snapshot. The average amateur will put forth great effort to secure sharpness, contrast and good composition in his ground subject and then completely overlook the possibilities of beautiful cloud effects.

One thing that really adds to the interest in a landscape picture is the clouds. Suppose we are taking such a picture and use a film which responds only to ultra-violet, violet, and blue light. We should not be able to distinguish between the clouds and sky if we give enough exposure to show detail in the landscape. This is because the light from the blue sky and the white clouds is very rich in light rays to which the film responds.

Although clouds and blue sky are both rich in ultra-violet, violet and blue, there is a marked difference between the two. The lights from the clouds, being white, actually contain, however, a lot of green and red light, while that from the blue sky does not.

This then, suggests a way to effectively show clouds and sky in a snapshot. We must use a film which will respond to green, or to green and red light, and put over the lens a filter which does not let through the ultra-violet, violet and blue. The green or green and red light from the clouds will thus affect the film, while practically no light from the sky will get through to it, and in the finished print, the clouds will appear whiter than the sky.

Some film is sensitive to green light only but super-sensitive panchromatic film will respond to both green and red light. All these films will, therefore, show up the clouds against the sky if used with a yellow filter.

From time to time you have perhaps heard of "filter factors". Here's what it means. Since the filter cuts out some of the light which would otherwise affect the film, a longer exposure must be given. The amount by which the exposure must be increased is known as the "factor" of the filter. It is noted by the number of times the exposure must be increased when using a color filter, as compared with the exposure without one.

The deeper the yellow color in the filter the more violet and blue it removes, or "holds back". The greater the "factor" the more the exposure must be increased.

As you will no doubt surmise, there are various types of filters and each type has its limitations. In choosing a filter you must make your own decision based on your general requirements.

If you do not want to seriously consider filter "factors" there is a filter known as a Sky Filter used extensively by amateurs to photograph clouds in a landscape with no increase in exposure time. Half of this filter is yellow and the other half clear. This filter can be used without increasing the exposure because the sky is photographed through the yellow part while the landscape, or general subject is photographed through the lower half, which is not colored. Yes, you can even get clouds with a silver lining.

Hikers Take The Sky Line Trail

Peter Whyte, prominent Banff artist whose paintings grace many drawing rooms in Canada and the United States, will lead the Sky Line Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies on a most interesting four-day holiday this year to Larch Valley near beautiful Moraine Lake and the Valley of the Ten Peaks.

Plans have been completed for the annual outing, from August 6 to 9, of this unique organization which seeks out the loveliest spots in the Canadian Rockies and spends four healthy, happy days on Snook's mare touring the valleys, alpine meadows, and rocky country above the timberline.

While hiking is a popular all-summer sport at Banff Springs Hotels and Chateau Lake Louise, the Trail Hikers give credit for popularizing beauty spots off the beaten trails. Like explorers of old, they comb the country for vantage points to witness a spectacular sunset or sunrise, for camera shots to take back home as trophies, and for lakes where the trout bite freely. With a central camp in Larch Valley, the Skyline Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies will spend their official four-day outing in leisurely jaunts through this particularly interesting section of the Rockies. On the closing evening they will have a pow-wow and election of officers.

No Judgment in Case over Letter Breen Collision

Mr Justice E. R. E. Chevrier, presiding at the fall session of Supreme Court in Owen Sound, reserved judgment in the $25,000 action of Evans vs Feick after counsels concluded their cases before him Friday afternoon. The suit, arising out of the accident on No. 6 Highway in November 1938, in which William G. Evans lost his life, had been in progress since the opening of the assizes on Tuesday afternoon.

M. S. Margaret Evans, wife of the deceased, and the mother and father of the deceased, are pressing the action against Henry Feick of Clifford, Ont., driver of the car into which the Evans car crashed as it drove north on the highway.

Crowds Attend Varney Fowl Supper
