

Pumps Return To Popularity

Cut and Styled, as Always, to Flatter Foot and Insure Comfort

It appears that we are all going to wear pumps again. Pumps that are cut and styled to flatter the foot—and at the same time assure the wearer of the walking ease. The styling of the pump makes it more interesting than ever, for there are fine rows of stitching to streamline the length; tiny little lapel turnovers to dress the vamp, and a great assortment of little and big bows or buckles to toy with.

HEELS STILL HIGH

The comfort mostly concerns the cut of the vamp and fit, for the heels are as high as ever in pumps. Not that you can't buy low-heeled pumps. You can, and they are liked by many women, but there's no denying the fact that the high heels are the most popular with young people, many of whom claim they are more comfortable than low heels. Toes, by the way, will peep through small openings, and the majority of pumps have closed backs, although some appear with open backs and open toes.

The open-back, open-toe sandal will not be one to struggle with this season, for it looks now as though the majority of our sandals will have closed backs, with open-toes and varied strap arrangements still popular and very smart.

Made Her Gift Of Mink Coat

Representative Canadian Women United to Give the Lady Tweedsmuir A Fitting Farewell Present

The Lady Tweedsmuir is taking back with her to her home in England a handsome mink coat, the gift of Canadian women as tangible evidence of the affection in which she is held in the Dominion. Small contributions from women all over the country made possible the presentation of the gift to Her Excellency.

Seven representative women waited on the Lady Tweedsmuir and asked her to accept the gift. Mrs. Ernest Lapointe, wife of the Minister of Justice, made the presentation and told the Lady Tweedsmuir how much her departure was regretted from one end of the Dominion to the other.

That as many women as possible might participate in the gift it had been asked that contributions be small and money poured in from the Yukon to Cape Breton. Small amounts in stamps came from the isolated Peace River and Cariboo districts which the Lady Tweedsmuir helped with her prairie library scheme.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

SALLY BLAIR—heroine. She had everything that popularity could win her, except DAN REYNOLDS—hero. He might have had Sally but while he was king on skis COREY PORTER was king of the social whirl. So... But go on with the story.

Last week: Sally finds Dan a striking, attractive fellow, earnest about his skiing ambitions. She feels a bit ashamed when she realizes she is "using" him to win her dare.

CHAPTER IV

As Corey had predicted, Dan Reynolds came off with most of the honors, and won most of the points for his college, the final day of the meet.

Sally thought she had never seen a more magnificent, or impressive sight than the thousands of enthusiastic spectators, surrounding the course with its back-drop of high hills, sheer cliffs, dark pines and bright sunshine.

The most beautiful and impressive event of all was the slalom race, set through its intricate patterns of bright flags, that required all the agility and skill of which the runners were capable. None of them, Sally saw, with a thrill of pride, could come up to Dan. A mighty cheer rose from all that enormous crowd as his swift, graceful figure shot the run, executing the high-speed Christmas, spray-throwing telemarks and the fast tempo-turn with astonishing and breath-taking perfection.

None of the other of the Big Six, for there were representatives from Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Yale, and Brown had any runner to match Reynolds. No other man came off with as many points as he, for Dan excelled, not only in slalom, but in jumping and downhill. "He ought to be in the Olympics," Sally said to Corey. "He could go professional. I've never seen anything like him, Corey. And I have seen some of the best."

This was after the meet, back in the fraternity house where a dinner-dance was in progress in honor of the visiting girls. For tomorrow the house parties would be over, the co-eds would pack their fluffy dance frocks and silver slippers, ski togs and clumsy boots; the men would settle down to cram for mid-term exams.

"Look here," Corey said, his eyes narrowing. "I'm getting a bit fed up, hearing you sing Reynolds' praise day and night, night and day. Don't forget you're still my girl—tonight, anyway."

He scowled so fiercely at another brother who gave evidence of intentions of cutting in that the rest of the stag line took note and knew they had better let Corey have a clear field this evening.

"That reminds me," he held Sally a little closer, gave her an unexpected whirl that nearly lifted her silver slippers from the floor, "we have a special date later on. Just you and yours truly. I've ordered a cutter; going to take you for a sleigh ride. And I've also ordered a big full moon. How does that sound to you, my sweet?"

"It sounds almost too romantic," Sally returned demurely. But she meant it. She was not at all sure that she wanted to take a moonlight sleigh ride alone with Corey. He might get ideas in his handsome head, ideas that would be too romantic for Sally to cope with. For she knew that Corey had lost his heart to her during this gay week-end.

NO TIME FOR ROMANCE
The funny part, however, was that Sally had hoped to add Corey Porter to her list of admirers. She had hoped this week-end would accomplish just that victorious conquest. For it was a conquest to land Corey. He never had fallen, seriously, for any girl. Like Sally, he was too popular, too much in demand.

Why wasn't she thrilled now, knowing that on this sleigh ride, Corey, without doubt, would ask her to be his girl, not just for tonight, but for always? What had happened to Sally to make her change her mind? Surely it had nothing to do with a boy named Dan Reynolds, a boy who, by his own admission, did not belong in Sally's glamorous world, who did not like a girl of her sort, or have any time for anything beside his beloved skiing. A boy who had waited table at this banquet at which Sally had presided, the prettiest, most sought-after girl present.

Now while Sally danced in her silver slippers and wide-skirted chiffon dress, with Corey's orchids nestling over her heart, Dan would be washing dishes in a stuffy hot kitchen. When Corey tucked Sally under the big buffalo robe in the cutter behind a dancing, spirited team, Dan would be obeying the strict schedule that kept him in such magnificent physical condition and that allowed him no time for romance.

SIGNS OF THAWING
Sally wondered, a bit wistfully, if in his dreams, perhaps, Dan might not think—just once—of her. For he had shown signs of thawing out, just a little, of liking her, just the last bit, during those early morning lessons. He had promised to give her a last lesson tomorrow before she went away—perhaps never to see him again!

"Why the big sigh?" Corey asked, bending closer. They sat together in the old-fashioned cutter, under the big robe. The sleigh bells jingled pleasantly in the crisp night air, the horse trotted lightly on the hard-packed snow. There was a moon, as Corey had promised. A big round silver one shimmering over this silvery, eerie, magical world.

"Because it's so beautiful," Sally said. "Because this is the last night. Because everything has to come to an end." Because, her heart said tomorrow will be the last morning I shall get up to meet the dawn, and Dan...

Corey gave the horses their heads, allowing the reins to lie in one hand. He threw his free arm over the back of the seat, around Sally's shoulder. His blue eyes looked down into hers. "But it does not have to end," he said. "Not for you and me, Sally. Not ever."

This was the moment of Sally's biggest conquest. Her moment of triumph. But why didn't her heart beat faster? Why did she wish this moment was not so close at hand?

"You know what I mean, Sally," Corey's voice was exceedingly earnest for him, for Corey always spoke gaily without seriousness. "You're going to be my girl—for always. I'm crazy about you, Sally. You're the first girl I ever really fell for like this. The sweetest girl—the prettiest, the sweetest—I ever met."

THE TABLES TURNED?
He took it for granted that any girl would be thrilled to hear him say that. That no girl could refuse to accept to be his. Wasn't he Corey Porter, who always got what he wanted? Wasn't Sally Blair, Queen of the carnival, meant just for him?

He did not notice that Sally drew away a little, was silent too long. He bent even closer, his arm tightening around her shoulders, his lips seeking hers.

But Sally, after a kiss too brief, too fleeting, turned away her head. It had not been too romantic. It had had no romance at all. That triumphant moment. It had proved to Sally that she could not be Corey's girl, no matter how sure he was, how right and fitting it might be.

It had proved something to Sally that made her frightened and glad, sorry and ashamed. For Sally, for the first time in her glamorous blithe existence, had stopped to look deeply into her own heart, to wonder and question what lay hidden there.

"Oh, Corey, I'm sorry," Sally said. And her voice was earnest, too not light and gay. "Terribly sorry. Truly I am. But I can't be your girl—ever. Because I am someone else's, her heart said. Someone who

Until Quints Speak English

Their Movie Careers Will Be Interrupted—Latest Film However Is To Be Released This Year

The movie careers of the Dionno quintts may be halted with the making of the fourth and final picture under the contract held by 20th Century Fox Films Co., until such time as the children learn to speak English, it was disclosed recently. The scheduled movie must be released before the end of 1940, under the terms of the contract. There were rumors that the company would forego making the last picture, but it is now understood it will be filmed in May or June.

WILL BROADEN APPEAL
The first picture made by the quintts, "The Country Doctor," was a tremendous success, but the picture which followed failed to click to the extent anticipated. It is now believed that the moving picture careers of the five children will be halted until such time as they learn English. They will start to learn the language at the age of 6, which occurs on May 28th. It is reported that the film studios feel that no picture of the quintts can have wide appeal unless they are able to speak English. If they become as adept at speaking English as they now are at speaking French, the quintts will again become an attractive proposition for the movies.

Your Requests
For some time I have been planning to give a column of requests. It is with a great deal of pleasure, that I do so. First of all it assures me of your interest in my column, and secondly it gives me an idea of what you wish discussed. If you have not written me, please do so and we will see what we can do to help you. It seems as if this week's recipes should give quite a variety to freshen up your weekly menus.

I am going to commence with waffles, as this is that incomparable time to all Canadians,—the days of Maple syrup. The first recipe was given last year.

Whole Wheat Waffles
½ cup whole wheat flour
½ cup sifted white flour (pastry)
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons of baking powder
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites stiffly beaten
½ cup milk
½ cup cream
4 tablespoons melted butter

Twice sift together pastry flour and baking powder. Then mix thoroughly with the whole wheat flour. Beat egg yolks well, mix with the milk and add to dry ingredients. After mixing thoroughly, add the melted butter; mix again and fold in egg whites stiffly beaten. Bake in hot waffle iron which has been greased with olive oil.

Maple Syrup Sauce
Of course plain maple syrup served with these well-buttered waffles is always a relish, but for variety here is your requested sauce.

Two-thirds cup maple syrup, 1½ cups brown sugar, one-third cup water, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 6 tablespoons heavy cream. Boil first four ingredients until sauce is a heavy syrup. Cool, add vanilla and cream.

Whipped Cream Sauce
Another very palatable sauce is whipped cream to which has been added grated maple syrup. This also makes a splendid addition to cake icings.

For the request for a whipped cream cake that is different try this.

Feather Whipped Cream Cake
1 cup of whipping cream
3 egg whites
½ cup syrup from canned pineapple

1 cup fruit sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups cake flour

Beat cream and egg whites together until stiff. Add pineapple syrup. Sift together the dry ingredients. Add to whipped cream mixture and mix thoroughly. Bake in two layers in a moderate oven.

Pineapple Icing
1 egg white beaten stiffly
2 cups sifted icing sugar
½ cup drained crushed pineapple

1 tablespoon orange juice
Beat well until the right consistency to spread. Some sugars require more, so if thin, add more icing sugar and be sure to sift.

Here is a recipe sent to me for testing and I guarantee it is all that the name implies.

Feather Roll
Soften 1 yeast cake in 1 cup lukewarm water. Beat in one cup flour and let rise for 1 hour. Scald ½ cup shortening, 1 teaspoon salt with ¼ cups boiling water. Cool to lukewarm. Add yeast mixture. Mix to a stiff dough with flour (about 6 or 7 cups. Knead). Let rise until light.

Brush with milk and bake in hot oven 20 minutes.

Tuna Short Cake
1 can tuna
1 cup canned peas
2 chopped hard boiled eggs
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cups white sauce

2 cups flour, 4 tablespoons shortening, ¼ teaspoon salt, two-thirds cup rich milk.

Mix flour, baking powder, salt and milk as for biscuits; roll into two layers in ordinary short cake manner. Then combine tuna, seasonings and white sauce. Add the chopped eggs and peas. Split shortcake white hot; place mixture between and on top. Individual biscuits may be made if you wish. Serve with tomato catsup. This is an ideal supper or luncheon dish.

Had the tables turned? Was Sally's heart to be broken? Sally, who had broken so many hearts before this, who had never cared, or taken anything earnestly before, with this mixture of singing gladness and frightened despair.

Lima Bean and Tomato Casserole
Soak lima beans overnight in cold water. Drain and cook in fresh water. They require about three hours cooking. Season after draining with salt and pepper. Butter casserole, fill with alternate layers of beans and seasoned canned tomatoes. Sprinkle the top with buttered bread crumbs and grated cheese. Brown in a moderate oven.

"Oomph" Teachers Get Preference

Iowa school boards have been advised to hire teachers with "oomph" from the standpoint of both attractiveness and professional zeal. "As children have no choice in regard to attending school," a State public instruction bulletin said, "the boards should at least give them teachers who are attractive, energetic, who love their work and who are capable of making school life happy."
