Predicts a Mild Winter

The corn husk is not thick. The green frog has not slowed in his leaping. Hickory trees are barren. Water-fowl did not come out of the north early. So this winter will be mild and because he has seen 75 winters. He is a member of the Cayuga tribe of the Six Nations.
When the winter is going to be long and cold, the chief said, the green frog slows up, the corn grows a thick husk, the hickory trees are loaded and ducks and geese come out of the north early.

URGE CLEAN-UP OF WEED AREAS

Should be done immediately states John D. MacLeod, Crops, Seeds, and Weeds Branch, Ontario Dept. of Agriculture

As seeds of many Ontario noxious weeds may be retained on the plants until late fall and distributed by various agencies during fall and winter months, these infested areas should be cleaned up immediately states John D. MacLeod, Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ont. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

The wind carries some weed seeds long distances in drifting soil and also over frozen ground and snow. An experiment conducted in the Province of Saskatchewan proved this fact when it was found that six ounces of surface soil taken from a spot along a road fence, contained the following seeds: Stinkweed 330; Wild Mustard 267; Hare's Ear Mustard 99; Stinkweed 3; Black Bindweed 150; Lamb's Quarters 15 and Ragweed 9. Another experiment conducted some years ago showed the presence of many weed seeds in snow some 32 seeds of nine species of seeds being found in two square feet of a snow drift.

Many weed seeds are eaten by birds during the late fall and early winter when other food is not plentiful. These seeds will not lose their vitality and may be carried long distances in this way.

Neglected fall weeds will spread plant diseases, gather and hold snow, clog ditches and thus hinder the flow of water, are dangerous from a fire standpoint and are a source of infestation to the entire community, Mr. MacLeod points out.

Many fields throughout Ontario infested with Wild Carrot, Toad Flax, Ragweed, etc., should be mown at this time, raked up and burned and the infested area brought into the crop rotation.

Seeds of neglected weeds growing in vacant lots, around buildings, fence lines and on banks of rivers, small streams and ditches may be carried long distances by spring floods.

By cleaning up and burning all neglected weeds at this time the appearance of property is improved in cities, towns and villages as well as farms.
