Grey County Carries on For the Red Cross

"Where people are ready and willing to work, there is always space available to house the work and the workers," writes Christine McGillivray Campbell in The Family Herald and weekly Star.

"In the former Methodist Church at Durham, Ontario, left vacant when decision was made to use one large building for the United Church congregation, Red Cross work is going forward with steadfast zeal.

Not always is a harmonious purpose found for the use of such churches. In this case, it is entirely suitable that a building in which works of mercy were long taught, should now boast ample shelves well filled with soldiers' comforts and refugee garments.

The Durham Red Cross holds work-and-social meetings here, as well as at the home of Mrs David Jamieson, who was honoured some time ago by the National Red Cross Society. Here in the former church are welcomed delegates from affiliated societies and war workers' organizations from the countryside about the town and here too is dispensed information and assistance with regard to packing and shipping supplies and boxes overseas.

In Owen Sound, lower rooms of the beautiful Public Library are used for Red Cross work-meetings, tea, planning bees, and for collection of piles of blankets, or for whatever the immediate call from headquarters demands.

A vacant store building in Chatsworth, a village south of Owen Sound, provides suitable accommodation for the Society's work. Here you can see the Red Cross flag waving and the symbol of the Red Cross in the window.

In a small rural school, at Lam-lash, somewhere in the heart of Bentinck Township, Grey County, where school fairs were held for years, and loyally dispensed with this year as a war economy, monthly meetings now are arranged by delegates of units in Bentinck Township War Chest, an organization formed to aid the Red Cross, Canadian Legion and several other helpful war activities.

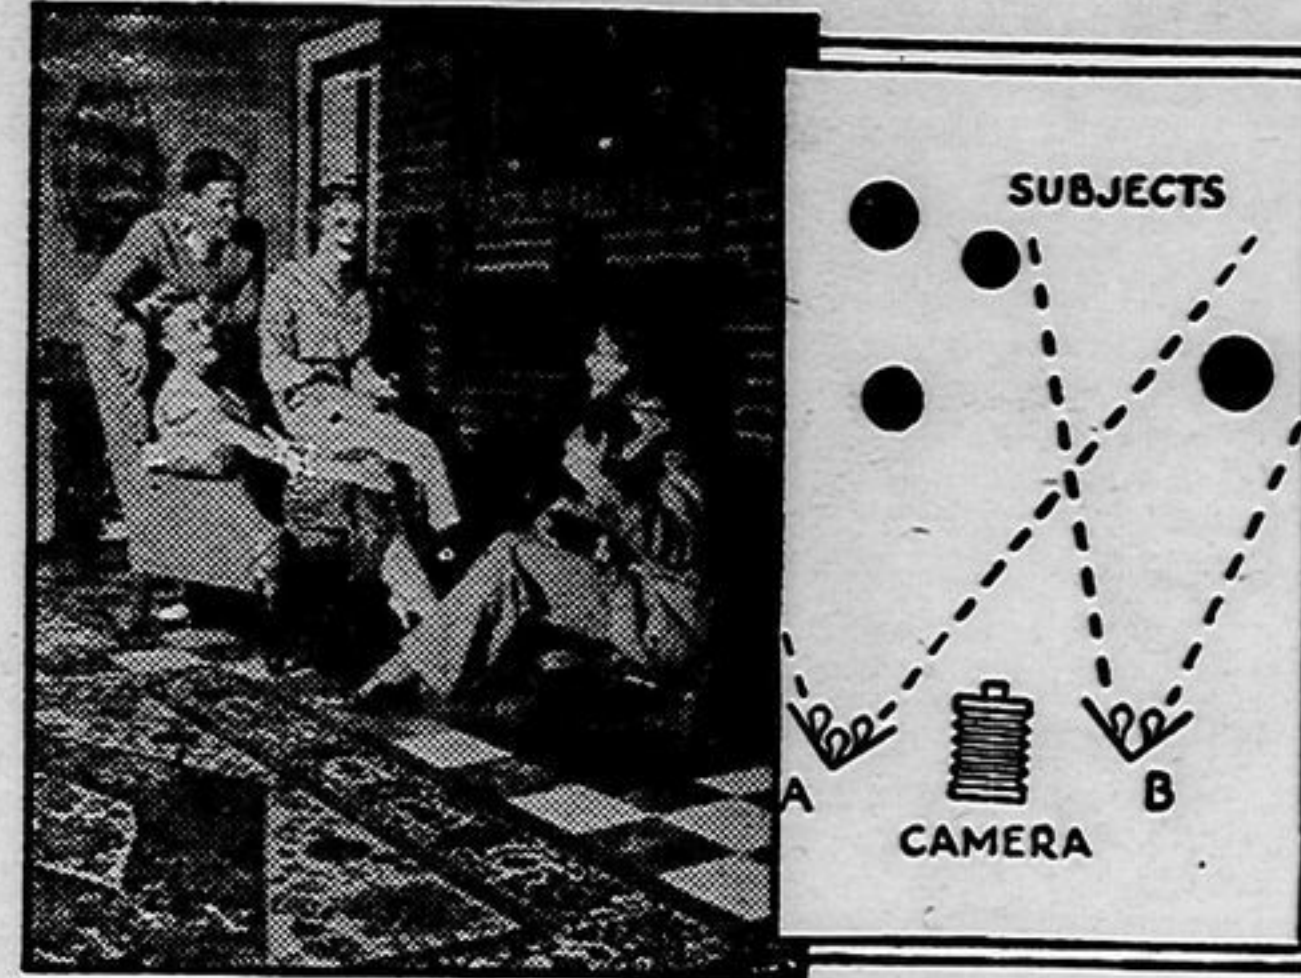

The women of Hanover have also been doing fine work particularly for the Canadian Navy.

If any community in Grey County is not busy with war work, it has yet to be reported."

Premier Bracken, of Manitoba, says that one-third of the population of Canada is associated with agriculture, and they receive only one-twelfth of the national income. He argues that the farmer should have a much larger share. He is right but how to get it is the trouble.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Don't Forget Snapshots at Night

ALTHOUGH you may not be one of those lovers of the great outdoors and prefer the warmth of the old fireplace or furnace these cold, damp wintry evenings, there is no reason why you should not enjoy your camera, for it is always ready for action in or outdoors—an all-weather friend.

Time passes quickly and before we realize where the days and weeks have gone the air begins to get a little balmy and we are thinking of the garden, the yard or those pleasant drives in the car after dinner.

The next three months, however, are ideal for snapshots at night in the house and if you have not already experienced the pleasure of this fascinating pastime you have certainly missed a lot of fun and failed to "follow through" on your amateur photographic knowledge.

The "hey-hy-hi-de-ho" days of youth are the ones we always remember and as snapshots at night are so easy to take why not start in right now and make picture records of the many happy winter evenings of the home?

All you need are three or four photoflood lamps for brilliant illumination and a camera with an f 6.3 lens, or faster. Photoflood lamps cost only twenty-five cents each and are for two hours of picture taking, the cost per result is negligible. For the best picture you should use the modern super-sensitive panchromatic film. It is available in all standard sizes.

Let's suppose that Mary and you are entertaining Betty and Jack and everybody is as happy as the four-some above seem to be. Let's make a snapshot at night of your party.

The diagram indicates the relative placing of the subject, lights and camera for this particular group. For a different setting you can place the lamps accordingly.

After you have located the group in the finder and the camera is set, place an ordinary floor lamp, with the shade tilted upward, at position "A" as close to the subject as possible but out of the range of your finder. Lamp "A" should have sockets for three photoflood lamps. Two will do if you can have the lamp within three or four feet of your subject. (The light intensity increases as you place the lights closer to the subject and decreases when farther away.) Two photoflood lamps should be placed in lamp "B." Where shades on home lamps cannot be tipped for directing light on the subject, remove the shade. In such cases, some sort of reflector back of the lamps will throw more light forward. A white cardboard, a pillow case, or even a bright dishpan held directly behind the lights will help.

Set the diaphragm at f 6.3. If your camera is equipped with a self-timer, set the shutter speed at 1/25th of a second, turn on your photoflood lamps, take your position in the group and—click—it has made a snapshot at night for you.

If you have a box camera you had better use a photoflash lamp (not to be confused with photoflood lamps). Here's what you do. Place the floor lamp slightly back of and a little to the right or left of the camera. Remove the shade and screw the photoflash lamp into one of the sockets—and be sure the current is "off." Assuming you have located the group, or subject, in the finder, open the shutter as you would for a time exposure and immediately turn on the photoflash lamp and after the flash of the lamp close the shutter at once.

Simple enough, isn't it? The possibilities for indoor picture taking are endless and you are missing a lot of fun—and fascinating pictures—until you try it.
