

The Fiend Twin's Diary.
January.—Amber. Didn't want to be. Object immediately as loud as I can. Younger brother born seven minutes later. Looks like a fool, but may improve as he mellowes with age.

February.—Catch a cold. Give it to younger brother. He's sicker than I am—nearly settles him.

March.—Catch a nose-ache. Pass it to the other nose. Pretty near winds up his stock.

April.—They've christened us. I'm Augustus and he's Alexander. Don't look the look of an Alexander! I'll kick him when he sleeps.

May.—Got the nettle rash. Ho-ray! so's he; only worse.

June.—They don't think they'll be able to rear him. He's to have cod liver oil. Can't help laughing.

July.—He's getting squalling. Nurse says it's a nutty temper. I know it's a pain, but I am $\frac{1}{2}$ to say so.

August.—We've got a new nurse who talks to a tall soldier, and leaves perambulator baking in the sun.

Alexander's got a blister on his nose. They don't know what it is, and they're going to give him a powder.

September.—I've given him the scurvy. He seems resigned. I've nailed his feeding bottle.

October.—I've got a new game now—poling Nelly into his ear when nuns isn't looking.

November.—We're beginning to walk. He's weaker on his pins than I am, so I can shove him over easy.

December.—I'm beginning to cut my first tooth. As soon as it's through, I've made up my mind to bite Alexander.

The dull times of the last few years have discouraged many farmers, and induced them to seek other employment, says an American exchange. Change, as a rule, is a slow and a money-making process, but more certain than the alternative of bankruptcy. Of 1,112 bankrupts in Massachusetts last year only fourteen were farmers; and in New York, of 2,550 bankrupts, but forty-six were farmers, though farmers constitute full half the population. According to the report of the New Hampshire Board of Agriculture there are in that State over 2,000 deserted farms so completely worn out and impoverished that no one can be found to work them for the crop. The number of破产s in the country cannot seem large in comparison with those of farming, but when we consider the risk all who buy and sell must continually take, it would seem the dictate of wise forethought to stick to the farm.

Some years ago a crack-brained horseman O'Connor presented a harmless old pistol at the Queen she was leaving Buckingham Palace. He was imprisoned for a few months, and then sent out to one of the colonies, where employment was found for him. Late, he announced his determination to return to England, and his departure was telegraphed to Scotland Yard, London. When O'Connor landed, two detectives were appointed to watch his movements day and night. They lost sight of him, however, and were ordered to go to the adjoining Palace, where, sure enough, O'Connor was found within the gates. How he got in is as great a mystery as the first time. The young man is now safely lodged in a lunatic asylum.

A fatality has attended the boilers on the ill-fated steamboat Sunnyside, which was sunk in the Hudson over a year ago. Last summer the Sunnyside was raised by the wreckers. The boiler was sold to a small cold to a man in New York, but they did not reach that city within the contract time, and the purchaser declined to take them. They were sold to a Southern manufacturing firm, and put aboard a vessel and she sank a short distance beyond Sandy Hook. The boilers are now at the bottom of the ocean in water so deep that no diver can reach them.

A Denver man who lost his overcoat discovered it on the back of the taxi while strolling down the street one day, and, pitching into the sneak, yanked the coat off his back, kicked him in the stomach, rolled him over in the snow, punched his eyes, tied him up in a bow-knot, and stood him on his head. The man will quit it at once before he discovered that he had made a mistake and that the overcoat was not his, but the man's, and that the man was an invalid Eastern cicycman, visiting Colorado for his health.

A disengaged man in Virginia city the other day, wrote to his landlady: "I am tired of life, so will blow out my brains to-night. My rent is paid up to the 8th. This is the last chance life is a burden to me." He started for the cemetery, carrying a loaded gun with which he intended to kill himself. On the way across a field he encountered a savage dog, and used all his ammunition in defending himself against the brute. That incident seems to have changed him and about life being a burden, and he still lives.

Prof. Cyr says of France: "Since 1789 there have been seven revolutions, and consequently as many forms of government—first, a republic; second, a monarchy; third, restoration of monarchy; fourth, liberal monarchy; fifth, a republic; sixth, an empire; and seventh, a republic. There are five political parties in France, and it is a constant struggle between three of them to drive out of power the remaining two."

The third session of the second Parliament of Manitoba was opened on Wednesday. Among the measures which will be laid before the Legislature are the incorporation of the English speaking people into the Assembly, an Election Amendment Act, a scheme for the establishment of a Canadian University, and a bill for the prevention of epidemics and the enforcement of vaccination.

In giving the names of failures this week, the Moscow Times says: "The failure to do well appears to grow smaller, although it is impossible not to believe that the number of failures for whom there is not room must be lessening."

Mr. Caven, collector of inland Revenue at Goderich, and Mr. McInosh, collector of Customs at Kincardine, seized an illicit still in the township of Huron, county of Bruce, on Thursday last.

"When a man falls on another man's property downtown he gets up and goes off just as serious and thoughtful as if the ice wasn't a foot and a half thick on the sidewalk in front of his own house."

"Unquestionably the best sustained work of the kind in the world."

Harper's Magazine. ILLUSTRATED.

Notice of the Press.

The Magazine has attained in its one quarter century an era of existence to that point where it may be said of it, in the words of Dr. Johnson: "It is to be numbered among the best." The lustre of its long-ago-attained reputation has increased on the years have passed, and it is now, in the judgment of critics, brighter than at any time since the golden hue of prosperity attended its latter, and best days.

Harper's Monthly is marked by the same characteristics which gave it circulation and popularity in its earlier days. It combines reading matter with illustrations in a way to make clear and interesting. Pictures are well designed to catch the eye of the ignorant are never inserted.—Chicago Journal.
