A Lost Rooster.

A short time since, during a rainy day farmer of Proton, was driving a load of furniture from a farm about a mile from this village to another one near Hopeville Among the miscellaneous articles on the waggon was a highly prized game rooste with his feet tied to-gether. Before goin very far his rooster-ship was suddenly dropped out of the waggon on to the ros where he was left, vainly trying to get to farm house a short distance away, and no ville, selling Oxford Shirtings at 10c. per doubt wondering if an earthquake had oc what was the matter, but at the same tin THE road work on Mr. P. But a good Samaritan who happened to be passing that way, found the luckless "bird," and taking compassion on him, took him to Lisown barn-yard, and crowing as loud as any "gamester" in th Township. Meantime, the first-named party becoming aware of his "sad" loss, left his wife to take along the load furniture, retraced his steps, anxiously look. ing for and trying to find his lost "game, but all in vain. He searched high, and he searched low, but nary a "game" could he find, at least not like the one he had and after spending six days in the search was obliged to go on to his destination without the much searched for game bird But we udderstand that afterwards he discovered where it was and no doubt by this John declares, by all the "Leeches" alive, that he will take better care next time o his game when "moving."

For the Guide. A Trip through the Parry Sound District.

On Tuesday the 12th inst., I, in comhours landed at Parry Sound. While but happily without doing any damage Parry Sound is pleasantly situated on a rising ground overlooking the Georgian Bay, distant from Collingwood 70 miles. The land is very rocky. A large quantity of pine lumber is to be seen in the vicinity of the village, and several large saw mills. While at this village, we would warn parties going to Parry Sound not to stop at Carrington, as a party at the latter place is in the habit of trying to impose on travellers, by making them believe that they are too late for the stage, and so keep them over a few days till the next stage leaves. From Parry Sound to McKellar, a distance of sixteen miles, the land is very hilly and rocky, but yet there are some very good buildings put up along-side the road. The land at McKellar is good, and a great improvement on that we had passed along the road. There are eight lakes between Parry Scund and McKellar. latter village is growing very rapidly, being in a fine section for stock raising. Having come to McKellar on the stage, which is a curiosity in its way, we proceeded foot next morning to Dunchurch, 16 miles from McKellar. The townships we had travelled through since leaving the steamer were McDougall, McKellar, Hagerman and Croft. The soil along the second part of ourney appeared to be very good, but was interspersed here and there with rocks. The crops looked well. Dunchurch is situated on the north side of White Stone Lake, -so-called from the white crystal line rock which abounds on its shore. The village is a very small place at present. I ing composed of a store, saw-mill, and two private residences.
