

Turco-Russian War. From the Globe summary.—As was to be expected, further contradictions of the rapid Russian advance towards the Balkans and of the capture of Tirova have been received. The latter place is still held by the Turks, and the Quadrilateral remains intact, interposing a formidable barrier to the junction of the Russian army of the Dobruzha with the troops whose headquarters are at Siatova. The Turkish headquarters are at Simla, where a Council of War, presided over by Redif Pasha, the Minister of War, is directing the operation of the army. A battle has taken place at Bela, which was not productive of any serious advantage to either side, though the Turks subsequently, it is said, fell back on Rusehnik.

Nearly all accounts from the seat of war in Asia Minor agree that the Russian have met with serious reverses, but their position does not appear to be as thoroughly compromised as would be inferred from earlier despatches. The most sinister feature of the Russian is the almost utter absence of official bulletins from the Grand Duke Michael, which hitherto has kept us informed of the progress of the war. The following are the positions of the respective forces as nearly as can be ascertained.—The Russian left wing, after advancing to Delibala, has now turned back on the line of advance and is marching on Bayazit, which is still invested by irregulars from Van. It will probably be unable to defeat these, save Bayazit, and re-establish communication with Erivan. A detached column of the centre, under General Heymann, after the defeat at Sarvan with serious loss, has fallen back to the neighbourhood of Kara, but the siege of Kara has not been raised, and the latest Turkish bulletins do not give the impression that Mukhtar Pasha feels himself strong enough to undertake its relief. The latest advices represent that he has advanced within fifteen miles of the Russian investing lines. There has been nothing definite from Batoum since the capture by the Turks of the Russian reinforcements are said to be hastening forward. The question of provisioning the armies is said to be growing serious for both sides.

On Friday the Russian force in the neighbourhood of Bayazit was driven over the frontier, and the citadel of the town summoned to surrender. Further north, at Ardanuch, a Russian attacking party was repulsed, and thrown back on Arhanah, where a great concentration of Russian troops is going on. On Wednesday last the line between Mukhtar Pasha's headquarters and Kara was completely open, and the Russians were withdrawing the bulk of their army, including their heavy artillery, in the direction of Alexandropol. Mustapha Pasha, the new governor of Kara, was on the way to that city with a reinforcement of four thousand men, and batteries had been despatched from Delibala to reinforce Mustapha.

On the Black Sea two Turkish frigates have bombarded the Russian seaport of Chiflik. It is now stated that in consequence of information received by the British Government the Russians intend occupying Constantinople at all risk, unless the Czar's terms are accepted. In the meantime, the views entertained by certain members of the Cabinet regarding the crisis in the East have undergone considerable modification, the result being that should a more active policy be proposed they will withhold their opposition. This is of course an unauthorized statement, but it reveals colour from the fact that the opinion in Russia Bay is not so unshakably fixed as it was.

The Russians in Bulgaria are said to have surprised and captured the Turkish camp at Tirova and to have advanced westward to Derwaza and Gohrova. The Cossacks have appeared in the neighbourhood of Rusehnik, and the Rumanians are preparing for an active demonstration in the direction of Wallin. A second army corps is about to be formed, under the command of the General in Chief, and will operate in the direction of Sofia. To the eastward the Russian advance guard in the Dobruzha has cut the Tchernavoda and Kistendil railways, and is advancing on the latter to the point of junction, whatever are reported on the line of the Danube between Tchernavoda and Rusehnik.

The Russians in Bulgaria have now advanced as far as Monastir, about twenty-five miles south-west of Rusehnik, where a battle is looked upon as imminent. The reports of Russian reverses in Asia Minor are fully confirmed, even Russian authorities recognizing that the campaign has been a failure.

Operations may shortly be expected in a fresh quarter on the Danube, in view of the fact that a convention between Serbia and Rumania has been decided on and that both the Principalities are to take an active part in the war.

Naval operations have again been resumed, and a Turkish fleet has commenced the bombardment of Eupatoria, and several Turkish vessels are at the mouth of the Danube with the object of stopping communications between Isonal and the Dobruzha.

With regard to the attitude assumed by the European Powers on the Eastern Question it is still at work. Lord Odo Russell is said to have declared to Prince Bismarck at Berlin that England can on no account permit a Russian occupation of Constantinople, to which the Chancellor is unable to reply that in his view such an occupation was the best means of securing the objects with which the war was declared.

An impression also prevails in London that active negotiations are going on between Austria and England to establish a basis for joint action relative to the war, and it is further asserted that large movements of troops are being made in Austria.

In the village of Anaster, on Tuesday last, whilst the festivities of the day were being indulged in, two men, one of whom was Campbell and Miller got into what was regarded at first as simply a harmless scuffle, but which resulted in a fight, during which Campbell hit about an inch of Miller's tongue off. The disfigurement was witnessed by a number of people. Miller's life is despaired of.
