

The Sentinel.

When General O'Hara was governor of Gibraltar, he was said to be perfectly crazy on matters of military discipline. He went so far as to have the shoes taken off his mule, on purpose that he might go through the rounds and visit the guards in the most silent manner, without being heard until he was close upon the sentinel.

As had been the long established practice, O'Hara always attended the Guard-mounting parade on the sands at six or seven o'clock in the morning and he took so much notice of the several guards that he could generally, during the remainder of the day, name them all.

One day as he was proceeding out of South Port in his carriage, when he passed an officer going into the town, and whom, at the instant, he remembered as having passed in review before him that morning, as commanding the south guard. Upon this the General immediately determined on satisfying himself as to the fact, and so he ordered the coachman to drive with speed to the south guard. Away they went at the rate of ten or eleven miles per hour, along the saluting battery; and in a short time the horses, out of wind and covered with lather, reached the south guard, a mile or more from the place where the General had met the unexpected officer. At the usual distance, the running sentinel called the guard to "turn out," which was obeyed with all the alertness desirable; and the officer advancing, unobserved by the General, at a quick pace from near the carriage, drew his sword, then, opening his ranks, presented arms and saluted in the best manner.

At the sight of the officer every doubt had been removed. "By Jove, it is himself!" thought the General, as he ordered him to turn in the guard and beckoned him to come up to the carriage.

"Pray, sir," impatiently inquired O'Hara, "did not I see you but a very few minutes ago walking very deliberately into the town near South Port?"

"Me sir?" exclaimed the officer, pretending the greatest simplicity and extreme surprise at the question, "I am guard here sir!"

"Well, well—I know that; you need not have supplied me with that valuable piece of information. Did I not, sir, I ask you again—did I not see you going into the town as I came out by South Port?" his excellency said, raising his voice, and his face reddening with anger at the offender's attempt to conceal the fact by his evasive reply.

The officer, after a moment, in no way disconcerted, and showing no symptoms of timidity, looked the General full in the face, and then, with great politeness said: "Will your excellency have the goodness to state to me whether that question is put to me by his excellency General O'Hara, Governor of Gibraltar, or from yourself in the capacity of a private gentleman."

The off-handed manner in which this question was put to O'Hara, struck the right chord, and, after a few minutes' hesitation, he replied with a smile on his countenance:

"Well, sir, as a private individual, I wish to obtain the information!"

"Then, sir, I freely confess that you did meet me at South Port!"

"Well, sir, that's honest. Now, sir, I want to know how you could get here on foot as quickly as I did in my carriage, and that, too without any discoverable fatigue?"

"Sir, I shall conceal nothing from you in the private capacity you have selected. On meeting you I strongly suspected that you knew me, and when you stopped your carriage to speak to your coachman, I guessed your motives; so, feeling that my conjectures were correct, and I had no means of arriving at my guard at the same time as yourself, I got up behind your carriage—the only means left me of securing that object."

"By Jove, sir," exclaimed O'Hara, "I like your candor, and still more the dexterity and readiness you have displayed in extricating yourself from a position of the greatest danger, without which you would undoubtedly have lost your commission. I admire a man who, when he has got into a scrape, can jump out of it at once. You must dine with me to-morrow," giving him a most hearty shake of the hand. "But take care! You must never leave your guard again, or by Jove I'll break you."

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR A DRINK OF WATER.—In one of the hotly-contested fights in Virginia, during the war, a Federal officer fell in front of the Confederate breastworks. While lying there, wounded, and crying for water, a Confederate soldier (James Moore, of Burke County, N. C.) declared his intention of supplying him of drink. The bullets were flying thick from both sides, Moore's friends endeavored to dissuade him from such a hazardous enterprise. Despite remonstrance and danger, however, Moore leaped the breastworks, canteen in hand, reached his wounded enemy and gave him drink. The Federal under a sense of gratitude for the timely service, took out his gold watch, and offered it to his benefactor, but it was refused. The officer then asked the name of the man who braved such danger to succor him. The name was given, and Moore returned unhurt to his position behind the embankment. They saw nothing more of each other. Moore was subsequently wounded, and lost a limb in one of the engagements in Virginia, and returned to his home in Burke County. A few days ago he received a communication from the Federal soldier to whom he had given the cup of cold water, on the occasion alluded to, announcing that he had settled on him the sum of $10,000, to be paid in four annual instalments of $2,500. Investigation has established the fact that there is no mistake or deception in the matter.

On HOBBS!—Surgeon—"Your pulse is still very high, my friend! Did you get those leeches I sent the day before yesterday?" Patient—"Yes, sir, I got 'em right enough. But mightn't I have 'em bled next time, sir?"—Punch.

A CURIOUS WAGER.—Thursday two gentlemen belonging to Hamilton, one a merchant and the other a druggist, made a wager upon a rather novel question. A bet was made that there will never be another Centennial celebration on the other side of the line; that ere another century passes away the Government will be monarchical. A accepts the wager, and the money—$10—is deposited in one of our banks to be given the heirs or assignees of the betting parties. It will amount to a small fortune in ninety-nine years.

EASTERN ECCENTRICITY.—Upon the announcement of the arrival of Prince Hassan, son of the Khedive, with the Egyptian contingent of 6,500 infantry and 1,000 artillery, the Sultan ordered the sacrifice of one hundred sheep at the gates of his palace, in token of his thanks to God. The Prince conformed to old-fashioned etiquette in presence of the Sultan. He touched both hands to his boots, and carried them to his head, and crossed his arms upon his stomach while reclining his body, but to the high officers of the palace and other dignitaries he simply gave a military salute in the European style.

On Saturday last a little girl about three years of age, daughter of Mr. Lovett, living at the sand hill, Meaford, was severely burned by her dress taking fire from some shavings which she and her sister were playing with in the absence of their mother. The arms, throat, face and abdomen are terribly scorched, but the burns would have been much more severe had not the sister with a presence of mind above her years (about 7) damped a night-gown and enveloped the burning child in it, thus smothering the flames. Dr. Maclean has been in attendance on the unfortunate girl, who though still alive is hardly expected to recover, or if she should recover will be terribly maimed and disfigured.—Monitor.

The story of that snake which the Collingwood township boy was said to have vomited a few weeks ago, turns out, so we are assured, to have been after all nothing more than another "snake story." No matter—if it did the boy good, let him hold fast in the faith.—Meaford Monitor.

The new Baptist church at Collingwood will be formally opened on Sabbath, the 12th August. The church has purchased a very expensive organ and secured the services of Miss Henderson as organist. All Saints Church is to be re-opened on the following Sabbath (Aug. 19th), and on that day a confirmation will be held.

Within ten years no less than 12,000,000 acres of forest have been cut down or burned over in the United States. Much of the timber is used for fuel, twenty-five cities being on record as consuming from 5,000 acres to 10,000 acres each. Fences use up much timber, and railway sleepers require the product of 150,000 acres per annum. The amount of pine and lumber timber yet standing in the forests of the timber States is estimated at 225,000,000 feet. The sum of $144,000,000 is invested in the timber industry, employing 200,000 men.—Journal of the Society of Arts.

The island of Australia had at the time of the gold discoveries in 1851 a population of only 214,000. Under the great impulse to immigration given by those discoveries, the country now contains 2,000,000 inhabitants, an increase of 884 per centum. The population of the United States during the same period increased 126 per centum, and that of Canada 669 per centum. Australian trade simultaneously rose from $30,000,000 to $315,000,000 in 1871, or 950 per centum, while the increase in Great Britain was only 400 per centum, and in Canada 650 per centum.

Read Carefully. SAMUEL OSBORNE, Sophiasburg, says—"I was affected with Dyspepsia for nearly four years, my lungs becoming affected towards the last. I was induced to try the 'Shoohonees Remedy.' After using three or four bottles I felt much better, and gained strength rapidly, and when I had taken three or four bottles more, I was quite restored to health and strength, and have experienced better health than for forty years before. I had been under the treatment of a number of physicians before, but never received any material aid until I used your remedy." A. M. KAY, Frank, N. C., says—"I was very bad with Liver Complaint, but used the 'Shoohonees Remedy,' and in a month was as well as I had ever been in my life. I am now in business and wish you to send me three dozen by steamer." A. WOOD, Conson, says—"That he has tried the 'Remedy' for Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia with great success. I have also used the 'Shoohonees Pills,' and find that they are as good as any I ever tried."

Rev. JAMES SCOTT says—"Mr. McKenzie being afflicted from an attack of Rheumatism, and was unable to move without help; but after taking a few bottles of the 'Shoohonees' was able to walk as well as ever." Price of the Remedy in pint bottles $1; Pills 25 cents a box.
