said prisoners term, sentenced to one years risonment, will not expire before April

3rd. We would recommend that the Connty Council should furnish a stock of stones for breaking, so that the prisoners, instead of being a loss to the County might be a profit more especially in the winter season when the gaol is filted with able-bod. ied men who are committed as vagrants. If such characters were compelled to break stones eight hours a day, the number we magine would become much less and thus save a large amount of trouble and expense to the County.

All of which is respectfully submitted. ROBERT PATTERSON, Foreman

A ROMANCE OF THE FOREST.

CHAPTER V.

When thus equip't, Jack started forth, Well knowing what his life was worth, If found; and Ola took the boat, In a dark hidden place, to float And watch events; the dog was tied With meet in plenty by his side, And soon, soft, rosy-fingered morn Was greeted by the loud bark-horn.

CHAPTER VI. The morning broke with scarce a breeze, The red sun climbing through the trees; A thousand warriors gathered fast, For loud did sound the bark-horn's blast. Forming in circle, great and wide, The claimants seated side by side; The king and princess on a dias, Justice to meet without a bias. Up Runo raised his great oak spear, Whose point ne'er quivered with a fear And two with spears to contest rushed With parry, guard and furious thrust: When the spear fell, it was to show That one had dealt a fatal blow,-But that his point was dull, you know. The conqueror, still, had two to meet, Unless the second he defeat; And every conqueror of the two Must still again the strife renew. Till three remained. Then Runo shot. At venture, to a distant spot; Then sped a flight, like birds on wings, And three were chosen next the king's. Then at a target Runo drew. And round his shaft full thirty flew. Each marked with some heraldic sign That told the branch of Runo's line: This was the highest test and seal ;

And looked upon as an ordeal. More than a trial of their skill .-For King and claimants at a sign, All standing in a given line, Discharged their shafts together .-Runo's well winged with eagle feather ;-When, lo! all shattered on the ground, The arrow of the king was found. Dark was his brow and filled with gloom, When from the earth he raised his plume, For well he knew prophetic sign, That soon would end great Runo's line:

"Who from thy arrow strips the feather, Thy kingly line shall sever. Thy name destroy forever; And with thine only daughter, Shall sink beneath the water.' Dark, troubled looks the warriors cast: Should Ola, then, be first and last,-First of the braves assembled there. And last great Runo's name to bear?

Twas true that chance had dealt him free. And twice he had been one of three: And needed but once more to win, To stand the magic circle in, And wrestle for an earthly crown, And joy of power, with high renown; But could his arm to you elm's bark Cast the stone axe and hit the mark? Or could he hurl the javelin You distant circle's rim within?-And even should he, they would pit Huge Lefe's strength against his wit;-

But lo! his axe the circle cleft, Although his spear passed to the left. Refreshment taken, all convene To where a dark line cuts the green, Across whose gloomy, mystic bourne None to the contest may return. Within the circle Ola stood; And Lefe huge around him strode; But Ola, supple as a clown, Trip't up and got the big chap down ; and made short work of several more, Who limping off deep inly swore, Some goblin stood in ola's skin, Who never had such grip and vim; As soon they'd try the brown bear's clasp, As rush again within that grasp. With loud applause the women shouted, Hoped he would win her, fear'd and doubted, As through the assemblage Brunistrode, For whom the warriors made road, Whose strength of arm might lift him sheer Dran Str.—Being desirous that others may know something of the merits of your Constitutional. Catarna Remeny, I wish to inform you what it has done for me. I am 18 years old; had been out of health for about five years. I had employed three or four different doctors, and tried various medicines, without receiving any permanent benefit, but continued rather to grow worse, until last fall when I had become so had as to be unable to do an hour work at a time. Had severe soreness and pain under the shoulder blades and through the shoulders, with very lame tack, and a feeling in my right lung as though there was a weight bearing it down, with continual dropping in the throat and down upon the lungs. Such was my condition when I commenced to take your Catarrh Remedy, one shottle of which cased my pains and gave me an improved appetite and after taking four bottles I was restored to health, so as to be able to endure hard and continued labor, such as chopping and clearing land, at which I have been engaged the latter of the second.
