Our flag shall gleam in the morning beam From many a spire in Richmond.

Our foes are near, their drums we hear,

They're camped about in Richmond;

With pickets out, to tell the route

We've crafty foes to meet our blows, No doubt they'll fight for Richmond

Our army takes to Richmond.

The brave may die but never fly,

But yesterday, in murd'rous fray,

We'll cut our way to Richmond.

While marching on to Richmond; We parted here from comrades dear,

While marching on to Richmond;

While marching on to Richmond;

We laid the braves in peaceful graves,

CHORUS :- Then tramp away, &c.

With manly sighs and tearful eyes,

And started on for Richmond.

Our friends away are sad to-day,

Because we march to Richmond

With loving fear they shrink to hear

The pen shall tell that they who fell,

The following article from a Bucharest journal gives some information upon the Russian plan of re organization for Bul-ussians, and furnishes a faithful illustration of the species of liberty which the Russian Government is pleased to introduce into the East, and of the administration which it desires to inaugurate in the land watered by so many streams of blood. The system of administration set in practice on the other side of the Danube in Bulgaria is precisely like the bureaucracy which oppresses Poland. The country is thus placing all his movements under the eye of a spy disguised in military uniform by and paid out of the State Budget. The liberty which holy Russia brings to Bulgaria is worthy of this liberator who holds in her chains unhappy Poland, and who strangles in her subjects every pretension to liberty. Bulgarians who escaped yesterday from the yoke of the Ottoman are certainly not to be envied to-morrow. Saddled with this system of Russian administration, with this liberty and the propay out of the Bulgarian pockets to a Govlong as their mission is to give Bulgaria the liberty of a second Russia? It is evident that if Europe does not take in hand the cause of the Christians in the East, if she leaves to Russia alone the part of liberator and organizer of these down-trodden
