What is Plymonthism?

LETTER II.

In my last letter I sketched briefly the rise of Plymouthism and the origin of the name. In this letter and the following letters let me just as briefly glance at the serious errors into which Plymouthists have drifted. 1. DENIAL OF AN ORDAINED MINISTRY. shown in the last letter, in a revulsion Britain on Thursday. Churchism, we would naturally expect to land, amounts to 1,120 persons. treme of non-churchism. Fleeing from ular Baptist S. S. The same doctrine is stated by Mr. Kelly, one of their leaders, in words somewhat Both temperance hotel keepers are daily in similar. "Any who possess the qualifica-

Hence in their assemblies Brethren," says Mr. Kelly in another tract, Elora and Fergus, and doing other "have no pre-appointed person to conduct damage. their proceedings; all is open to the guidance of the Holy Ghost at the time, so that authority that one of the mines in the rear ing to this position of Plymouthism every cent. of gold, man that thinks he can preach should at thing in the church of Christ, as Offices long and three the and Officers such as ministers or pastors and elders and deacons. There were such officers and offices in the days of the aposthes, but such offices and officers, says the Plymouthist, ceased with the apostolic offices and times. Running away from the doctrine of apostolic succession of the High Church, the Plymouthists have landed in the doctrine of the Quakers, that an order of men invested with the character and exercising the office of the ministry is unnecessary and unlawful, and that every man is to be guided in the worship of God, and government of God's house purely by spirit, as they call it, or as others might say by impulses which he feels at the moment. There is, thus we see, gift of ministering and of ruling, according to Plymouthism, but there is no office of either ministry or rule. There is a spirit of prophecy, but no office of the prophet. In the Plymouth Societies when met for

There is always a but; so that at last the ministers are butted out of their office, and the office butted out of the Church

Now, Mr. Editor, while accepting the denial made by the Galt preachers while here that they are not in communion with the Plymouth Societies, it is a fair and leate question to ask, are they in sympathy with the Plymouth spirit in this its hostility to the regular ministry? In accordance with the rule I laid down at the sailors to man three fast vessels bought in commencement, I make no such charge against these men; but will leave it to the judgment of your readers, whether the influence, teaching, and bearing of the Galt men while here were fitted to raise the them to death;" to teach the people according to the direction of an inspire!

On this point I have before me the words of your correspondent, "Z," in answer to "Enquirer." "These men at their meetings seized every opportunity of and elders of the Presbyterian Church, whom they said were unconverted." If that mode of working and speaking is not the preservation of health. Plpmouthism it is not far from it.
