

Cold Feet and Sleeplessness.

The association betwixt cold feet and sleeplessness is much closer than is commonly imagined. Persons with cold feet rarely sleep well, especially women. Yet the number of persons so troubled is very considerable. We know now that, if the blood supply to the brain be kept up, sleep is impossible. An old theologian, when weary and sleepy with much writing, found that he could keep his brain active by immersing his feet in cold water: the cold drove the blood from the feet to the head. Now, what this old gentleman designed, is secured for many persons much against their will. Cold feet are the bane of many women. Light boots keep up a bloodless condition of the feet in the day, and in many women there is no subsequent dilatation of the blood-vessels when the boots are taken off. These women come in from a walk, and put their feet to the fire to warm—the most effective plan of cultivating children. At night, they put their feet to the fire, and have a hot bottle in bed. But it is all of no use; their feet still remain cold. How to get their feet warm is the great question of life with them—in cold weather. The effective plan is not very attractive at first driving the blood-vessels into firm contraction, after which secondary dilatation follows. See the snow-baller's hands! The first contact of the snow makes the hands terribly cold; for the small arteries are driven thereby into firm contraction, and the nerve-endings of the finger-tips feel the low temperature very keenly. But, as the snow-baller perseveres, his hands commence to glow; the blood-vessels have become secondarily dilated, and the rush of warm arterial blood is felt agreeably by the peripheral nerve-endings. This is the plan to adopt with cold feet. They should be dipped in cold water for a brief period; often just to immerse them, and no more, is sufficient; and then they should be rubbed with a pair of hair flesh-gloves, or a rough Turkish towel, till they glow, immediately before getting into bed. After this a hot-water bottle will be successful enough in maintaining the temperature of the feet, though without this preliminary it is impotent to do so. Disagreeable as the plan at first sight may appear, it is efficient; and those who have once fairly tried it continue it, and find that they have put an end to their bad nights and cold feet. Pills, poultices, leeches, "night caps," all narcotics, fail to enable the sufferer to sleep successfully; get rid of the cold feet, and sleep will come of itself.—British Medical Journal.

Coffee-Drinking in the East.

The son of the Orient drinking his coffee unskimmed, swallows the black but nutritious sediment with the infusion, and consumes at times not less than eighty cups daily. Far on the burning desert he sits under his black hair tent, silent and motionless, till in the other half of his airy dwelling the Nubian slave has prepared his refreshment. When his pipe and cup are handed to him he leans luxuriously back on his cushions or his bales of goods, casting an indolent glance at the drooping horses, tied to a post before his tent, or the weary camel crouching on his sand and chewing the cud; but soon his eye becomes animated, his fancy revives, and he thinks of the fate of the loved one at home, or he weaves fantastic fairy tales into bright stories and graceful verses. The monotone noise of the mortar in which, all day long, the small beans of dark yellow color are crushed so as to furnish an unbroken supply, alone accompanies his thoughts, and fills up its vacant moments by its uniform rhythm. Or he is in Stamboul, the Happy City; a marble paved courtyard, over-shadowed by mulberry trees and pomegranates, and freshened and cooled by a merry fountain in the centre, which casts its spray in fitful shadows on roses and jasmine; an open stair-case leads up to a well-lighted room, and bright-colored tiles on the walls, and richly dyed rugs scattered over the inland floor; gold lines arabesque, and mother of pearl in profusion adorn the ceilings; and in pretty niches behind carefully carved doors, stand delicate cups and boses for tobacco. The windows look down upon the cool yard, and a long low divan with soft cushions runs along the wall. There is no chair nor mirror here; no table and no pictures as in European coffee-houses, but black servants in military costumes walk slowly about, offering chibouk and coffee-cup to every guest, silently he enters, in silence he sips his pipe and drinks his cup of coffee, and silently he leaves the house again. Few guests, perhaps, are busy at chess; others may listen to the pory-teller on the little platform there on the Persian rug on which he sits, or they gaze with stolid eye at the juggler, who produces from under his tunic strip of carpet whatever is asked for by his audience. But no one opens his lips; no one reads a journal; there is no interchange here of thoughts, no making of acquaintances, or forming of acquaintances. The dreamy still life of the Orient knows no other enjoyment than listening in silence while smoking and sipping the cup of coffee.—From the "Ladies' Treasury."

THE FEAR OF DEATH.

Weariness of mere existence is a heavy, and probably a very common, secret burden; one which makes the thought of annihilation more attractive to some of us than any celestial visions. Those who suffer from it would not welcome the fairest prospects of heaven, unless they could hope first for a "long and dreamless sleep" in which to wash off the travel-stains of the past. This is a feeling which is probably most common in youth or old age, when the ties of life are fewer than they are at its prime, and when the past or future may well loom almost intolerably long to the miserable experience of some sufferers this deep weariness of life may not exclude the fear of death; but so terrible a combination can scarcely be even common or lasting. Probably the normal state of things is that in which some degree of fear, or at least of reluctance, exists as a pure instinct; rising and falling with physical causes, ready to give force to the terrors of conscience or the cravings of affection, but held in check by various considerations and controlled by the will, if not utterly subdued by trustful hope. In people of active energetic temperament, with keen susceptibility to sensuous impressions, one may sometimes observe that either no amount of religious hope for another life, or of the painful experience of this, will overcome the constitutional shrinking from the anticipated surrender of body and soul. They carry the same feeling through sympathy into their thoughts of the death of others, which appears to be almost physically shocking to them however obviously acceptable the person chiefly concerned. Such a state of feeling is to those who do not share it as unaccountable as it is evident. Looking at death calmly, as one of the very few circumstances of quite universal experience, any vehement disinclination to it would seem to be inappropriate as well as futile. But disinclination to some of its accidental circumstances is but too easily intelligible. This probably is another reason why the shrinking from it often seems to increase as youth is left behind. The very young cannot know how terrible a thing sickness is; those who have watched many deathbeds can scarcely forget the awful possibilities of physical suffering. And yet it seems probable that many of the worst appearances are more or less delusive. A very moderate actual suffering bears no exact proportion to its outward manifestations. Be this as it may, physical suffering is clearly no necessarily no accompaniment of death, and the dread of pain which makes us shrink from the prospect of mortal illness is quite a different thing from the red instinctive dread of death; it should indeed, and often does, act powerfully in reconciling us to the prospect of death.—Cornhill Magazine.

PERHAPS AND PERHAPS NOT.—A Kentucky girl agreed to elope with her lover. She descended the ladder in the night and started with him on horseback. "Now you see how much I love you," she said; "you will always be a true and kind husband, won't you?" He answered gruffly: "Perhaps I may, and perhaps not." She rode silently a few minutes, when she suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, what shall we do? I have left my money behind me in my room!" "Then," said he, "we must go back and fetch it." They were soon again at the house, the ladder was again placed, the lady remounted, while the ill-natured lover remained below. But she delayed to come, and so he gently called: "Are you coming?" when she looked out of the window and said: "Perhaps I am, and perhaps not," and then shut down the window.

PRINCE PETER OF OLDENBURG has just had a somewhat exciting experience. He is at the head of the Imperial Russian Colleges for Girls and is very diligent in performing his duties. He lately decided to see for himself whether there were any grounds for the numerous complaints of the poor folk furnished at the Smolning Convent, where 800 girls are educated. Proceeding to the institution just before the usual dinner-hour, he avoided the main entrance and walked straight toward the kitchen. At its door he met two soldiers carrying a huge steaming cauldron. "Hallo! he called out. "Put that kettle down!" The soldiers of course obeyed. "Bring me a spoon," added the Prince. The spoon was at once produced; but one of the soldiers ventured to begin a stammering remonstrance. "Hold your tongue!" he exclaimed. "Why, it is dirty water!" "It is, Your Highness," replied the soldier. "We have just been cleaning out the laundry."

GALIC LANGUAGE.—In Great Britain and Ireland there are 867,000 people who speak Irish-Gaelic; 309,250 who speak Scotch Gaelic; 12,500 who speak Manx 1,005,000 who speak Welsh, the total number of those who speak a Celtic tongue is 2,195,450, or nearly 7 per cent. of the whole population. The last person who could speak Cornish died about 1791.

A scamp who represented himself as a Government agent, excited the negroes of Holmes County, Miss., by telling them that a free train would take them on the following Sunday to Kansas. He charged every man $1 for a small flag, which was to be his title to a spot of land when he reached Kansas. The news spread like wildfire, and, selling their cows for $8, their chickens for a penny apiece, and other possessions at as ruinous rates, 1,000 negroes gathered to wait for the train that never came.
