in his own ability. A faint-hearted man is unstable, and will never excel. Faith in important in a successful business career as is the keystone to the arch. A man possessed of a bold, daring, and resolute will may be modest in revealing his powers, but will be determined in performing what he conceives to be right. To men with this neverdying faith there is no such word as defeat, and when obstacles present themselves in their path it only results in their putting forth a greater effort to accomplish their purpose. Toil, trial, disaster, gloom, and danger may environ and threaten to over throw the most cherished plans, yet over and above all hindrances an heroic soul will triumph and win fame and honour. The discouragements that would retard the irresolute only discover the weak places to the brave, and, strengthening these, they renew the conflict with increased vigour. Timidity creates cowards, and never wine success. It is a strong and abiding faith in one's own ability to perform that overcomes difficulties that others thought could not be surmounted. In all the pursuits of life we find that those who achieve honour own ability, and carry out plans conceived in their own brain.
