Sharpers Rob a Farmer of $50.

A farmer (named Brown, we understand,) from Amaranth, was robbed of $50 in Fergus on Thursday last, fair day, in an outrageously barefaced manner. A couple of sharpers who professed to want to buy horses got the farmer into Morrow's hotel stable to look at a horse there. The farmer told them he had as good a horse as the one pointed out. This was disputed, and various dodges were resorted to in order to entice the Amaranth man into a bet. Such sure things were offered him that finally he pulled out his pocket-book and put up fifty dollars. There being only the three parties in the stable, of necessity one of the sharpors had to be stake-holder, and indeed no objection was raised to this by the unsuspecting farmer. As soon as Brown handed over his $50 the stake-holder placed the hand in The incidents, episodes, and utterances which he held the money belind his back, of genius are to men of intelligence things and entered into conversation with Brown of great value, and treasured up by them as regarding the bet .- While this was going a part of their intellectual wealth.
