Thy days are happy now fair maid, The sun of youth now dawns on thee, The hand of sorrow ne'er hath laid

POETRY

Upon thy youthful brow, I see. But who can tell what years may bring. The sun of youth doth quickly set; Stern sorrows then may round thee cling,

And oft with tears thy eyes be wet.

Or joys, perhaps, may be in store Earth's brightest flower's may dock thy way, And sunbeams may forever more, Around thee shed a happy ray.

Should sorrows come, my youthful friend,

And waves of griof around thee roll, I pray that God may comfort send, . And breaths sweet peace into thy soul. May joy attend theeris my pray'r, And sunbeams ever round theo dart; May God receive a jewel rare,

And may that jewel be thy heart.

Only a Husk.

Tom Darcey, yet a young man, had grown to be a very bad one. At heart he might have been all right, if his head and his will had only been all right; but these being wrong, the whole machine was going to the bad very fast, though there were times when the heart felt something of its old truthful yearnings. Tom had lost his place as foreman in the great machine shop, and what money he now earned came from odd jobs of tinkering which he was able to do, here and there at private houses; for Tom was a genius as well as a mechanic, and when his head was stendy enough, he could mend a clock or clean a watch, as well as he could set up and regulate a steam engine hew like sweet music the old voice sounds. -and this latter he could do better than any other man ever employed by the Scott

Falls Manufacturing Company. One day 'fom had a job to mend a broken mowing machine and reaper, for which he received five dollars, and on the following morning he started out for his old hauntthe village tavern. He knew his wife sadly needed the money, and his two little children were in absolute suffering from want of clothing, and that morning he held a debate with the better part of himself ; Priceville P. calling of his name had stung his senses to keen attention. He had an insane love for rum, but did not love the landlord. In other years Peter Tindar and himself had loved and wooed the sweet maiden-Ellen Goss-and he won her, leaving Peter to take up with the vinegary spinster who had bought him the tavern, and he knew that lately the tapster had gloated over the wo man who had once discarded him.

"Why don't you send him home?" de manded Mrs. Tindar, with an impatient

"Hush, Betsey! He's got money. Let him be, and he'll be sure to spend it before he goes home. I'll have the kernel of the nut, and his wife may have the husk."
