Queen Victoria.

The last paragraps of the concluding vol ume of "Royal Windsor," which Mr. Hipworth Dixon had just completed before his death, are as follows, "The central figure in this family group is veiled. The veil is not without a silver lining, but the veil is here; a habit of the mind as well as of the physical trame. No great emotion should be seen to near. To read the story of such a loss we need some help from time and space. When Queen Victoria has become to the descendants of her people what Queen Elizabeth is to us; when all the trifles of our time are gone and only therealities left, the story of her love, her hap- eat it greedily ; and the effect is that their pinees, her loss, will be a favorite theme of milk and butter will be tainted with the poets, artists and story-tellers. How Butter is Sometimes Tainted.

Winter and spring butter is often very LUMBER, much injured in flavor by allowing cows to eat the litter from horse stables. Cows are not unfrequently very fond of this litter, though it is impregnated with liquid manure from the horses, and if allowed, they who came te her and made himself a part the butter has a disagreeable taint, and the story of their lives will be unrolled; years of domestic bliss, broken at length by a sudden snap in the very noontide of their consume all the litter which, on account of married joy.
