POETRY

For the Grey Review. New Year's Hymn. O Lord another year we've seen Pass like a shadow or a dream, With all its hopes, and joys, and fears,

Its pains and pleasures, smiles and tears. And now when a new year is rung, To Thee we raise our grateful song Of thanks for all the mercies shown To us throughout the year that's gone.

And while we welcome the New Year, O may we feel that then art near. And seek thy blessing to attend Our journey through it to the end. And may the seasons as they fly, Remind us that we too must die;

That life is but a fleeting day. And if O Lord this year should be The last which we shall ever see, O, may our happy spirits wing Their flight to heaven, to Christ their king.

That here on earth we cannot stay-
