

What Men Need Wives For.

Not to sweep the house, and to make the bed, and darn socks, and cook the meals, chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a lady, send him into the pantry to take the bread out and she has made; send him to inspect the needle-work and bed-making, or put a broom into her hands and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quietly look after them.

But what the true man most wants of a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, a man needs a companion to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortunes, he meets with failure and defeat, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has stern battles to fight with poverty, with enemies and with sin, and he needs a woman at his side, who puts her arms around her and feels that he has something to fight for, will help him to fight; that will put her lips to his ear, and whisper words of counsel, and her hands to his heart and impart new inspirations.

All through life—through storm and through sunshine, conflict and victory, through adversity and favoring winds—man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's or a mother's love will hardly supply the need. Yet many seek for nothing further than success in house-work. Justly enough, half of these get nothing more. The other half surprised above measure, have obtained more than they sought. Their wives surprise them by bringing a noble idea of marriage, and disclosing a treasure of courage, sympathy and love.

A Census of Rocks.—The United States Census Bureau has undertaken an important work in collecting information relating to quarries of building, flagging, ornamental and other kinds of stone in all parts of the country. The enquiries cover not only the extent and location of the stone, but the amount of capital employed, the annual output, methods of quarrying and dressing, number of hands employed and wages paid, methods of transport and their cost, number of structures of all sorts made of each sort of stone, and so on. Duplicate samples of rough rock in the shape of four inch cubes are being got from each quarry for physical and chemical examination. This part of the work is in charge of Dr. Hawes, and one object is to ascertain how each stone will stand under different conditions as to temperature, &c. A stone which answers admirably for building purposes in Florida will fail in New York, and vice versa. As an example of various interesting facts brought to light, some samples of a kind of sandstone were received from the oply quarry in Florida, and analysis showed that the rock contained about 16 per cent. of phosphoric acid, so that it is a great deal more valuable as a fertilizer than as a building stone. Sandstones and limestones which have never been thought worthy of any better place than in the foundation or wall of some rough structure have been smoothed and polished, and found suitable for the most elaborate and elegant work. Dr. Hawes is convinced from the samples already received, that no country is better supplied with stone for both building and ornamental purposes than the United States, and he considers that when the result of the present inquiry are fully known, importation of stone from foreign countries will be given up.

Several specimens of native American birds are finding friends and purchasers across the Atlantic—in Germany, France, and even England. The porcupine, for example, one of our very handsomest birds, was sent over to Europe last year to the number of three thousand five hundred by one single house. The cardinal, or Virginia nighthawk, or Virginia red bird is likewise making the grand tour. Over five thousand of these cardinals were reported last year from the city of New York. The indigo, or American blue bird, is likewise making the grand tour. Even the Irish, a proverbially hard people to convince, have practically confessed that "although the Irish thrush is the best, the American brown thrush is just as good."
