veloped itself into the greatest and grandest Legislature in the world, and which had also shaken from its spreading branches legislative acorns of the old English oak that had nourished themselves in the Dominion of Canada, in Australia, and in the United States.

Upright members of Parliament, the reflected glory of the people who elected them.—Lack of political honesty in the member of Parliament is a disgrace to his constituency as well as to himself and a serious injury to the higher nature of both, which is to them a great moral evil, even with much material gain. They went up again to the garret and Jack the servant boy was summoned. "Jack, child, what had I for dinner yesterday?"

"Don't you remember, sir? you had a little shoulder of mutton that you ordered me to bring from a woman in the market."

"Very right, child, what have I for dinner to-day?" "Don't you know, sir, that you bid me lay by the blade bone to broil?"

"This so, very right, child; go away." "My lord," said Marvell, turning to the Treasurer, do you hear that? Andrew Marvell's dinner is provided. Their's your piece of paper. I want it not. I live here to serve my constituents; the Ministry may seek me for their purpose; I am not one of them."

When Andrew Marvell died his constituents carried on his headstone: "Beloved by good men; feared by bad; imitated by few; and scarce paralleled by any."

It appears that the Syndicate is not alone "American" in men and money, but in sympathy as well; for when the goodly monopoly has a place of trust to fill, it selects not a man from among the many qualified Canadians, but gets an American. "No Canadians need apply."
