

Newspaper Laws.

We call the special attention of our readers and subscribers to the following points of the newspaper laws:

1. If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount without it being taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until payment is made.

2. Any person who takes a paper from the post office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not is responsible for the pay.

3. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

6. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

7. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

8. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

9. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

THE VICAR'S GOVERNESS. THE FARM.

CHAPTER XIII. "Is she not passing fair?"

"Two Gentlemen of Verona." The day at length dawned when Miss Broughton chooses to put in an appearance at Dullingham. It is Thursday evening when she arrives, and as she has elected to go to the vicarage direct, instead of to the vicarage desired, nothing is left to the latter but to go down on Friday to the Redmonds' to welcome her.

She (Clara) had taken it rather badly that pretty George will not come to her for a week or so before entering on her duties; yet in her secret soul she cannot help admiring the girl's pluck, and her determination to let nothing interfere with the business that may rest for the future upon her life. To stay at Dullingham, to fall, as it were, into the arms of luxury—to be treated, as she knew she would be, by Clara, as an equal even in worldly matters, would only to unfit her for the routine of a governess, and she would be unable to abstain, and fling far from her all thought of a happiness that would indeed be real, as Clara had been debarred to her two years ago, and to be dear to George one would mean to be dear to her forever.

"The vicar himself opens the door for Clara, and tells her, Miss Broughton, that she is not to be overjoyed to see her.

"What a fairy you have given us!" he says, laughing. "Such a beautiful child! all golden hair, and sweet eyes, and morning rainbows. We are perplexed—indeed, I may say, dazzled at her appearance; because we have one and all fallen in love with her—both the vicar and I. She is really lovely, and less, irrefragably, and hardly know how to conduct ourselves toward her with the decorum that I have been taught to believe should be shown to the instructress of one's children. Now, the last young woman was so different."

"Young," says Miss Peyton. "Well, if you like it, she certainly is young. But this child is all fire and youth. She is really lovely, and less, irrefragably, and hardly know how to conduct ourselves toward her with the decorum that I have been taught to believe should be shown to the instructress of one's children. Now, the last young woman was so different."

"Oh, she is a beauty," says Clara, smiling. "I am so glad you all like her!" says the vicar, beaming with satisfaction. "She is such a dear little thing when I last saw her, so gentle, so sweet, so full of life and vigor."
