AN IMPENDING STRUGGLE.

Sir Charles Dilke Predicts a European War -England Will be Alone in the Fight.

A letter from Mr. Gladstone was published in London the Other day denouncing the wholesale increase of expenditures on armaments as wild, wanton, and perilous, but it fails to evoke any sympathy. The public is more moved by a serious article from the pen of Sir Charles Dilke, just published, predicting that Great Britain, single-handed, is destined to engage in great struggle against Germany, Russia, and France combined. The fight, he claims, may come at any time within a decade, ostensibly about Egypt, but, really, on account of jealousy of Great Britian's colonial expansion. Therefore, Sir Charles urges Great Britain to hold berself free from any alliances which might only prove illusive, and devote herself to the development of her defences.

The Spectator propounds the question as to what role America will play in such a struggle affecting her colonial interests.

The discussion regarding England's 'splendid isolation" is again to the fore.
