Editorial Note and Comment

—Hon. G. W. Ross gave an address on "Christian Citizenship," at the late Christian Endeavor Convention at Ottawa.

—Shipments of gold to the United States continue to be large and it is disappearing. The cause is supposed to be hoarding in fear of a victory for Bryan and the Silverites when a financial catastrophe is feared may happen to those who have not their wealth in gold.

—The Supreme Court has decided that the Provinces have jurisdiction over inland fisheries, and the Dominion Government will probably appeal against this decision to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In that event Sir Oliver Mowat, as Dominion Minister of Justice, will have to fight about face on Provincial rights for once.

—Readers of the Globe who follow Mr. Cateb Jenkins, would be glad to see how he straightened up with Sir Chas by sending a clear receipt for those pre-emption services, on the occasion of his golden wedding. Now the good man has got a black eye, the result of following Li Hung Chang's illustrious example, asking a lady, "How old are you?"

—Dufferin County has just had an audit taken by a government commissioner of its accounts since 1880. He finds that a treasurer, now deceased, had deficits amounting to over $11,000. His sureties have made this up and made themselves right from his estate. The commissioner's finding is a severe slap to the auditors of all these years and indirectly to the councils which appointed them, for the discrepancies were such as should have been discovered. This we learn from the Dufferin Post.

Dr. Jno. Watson, "Ian Maclaren," the famous author of "The Bonnie Brier Bush" is on a lecturing tour at present and has addressed large and sympathetic audiences in Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere. He is an only child, was born in 1850, and spent a part of his youth among such scenes and characters as he has faithfully portrayed. At college he was "distinguished more as a brilliant social and intellectual force than as a laborious student." His two books bid fair to become classic, and those who have not read them should put themselves in touch at once with perhaps the most striking literary success of the end of the century.

—Mr. Tarte, Minister of Public Works is receiving a large measure of good advice at present. Mr. Tarte is human, knows the use of money, and accepted $3000, as a loan from Shaugnessy, a C. P. R. official just before the late election. We are inclined to think that Mr. Tarte should have refrained from receiving money from such an official at such a time. But he was Mr. Tarte who forged this investigation, in which he has shirked nothing, and rightly there has acted as a man who has nothing to hide. Besides it is not shown that he spent the money corruptly. The Premier's confidence in Mr. Tarte will yet be seen to be justified.

Laurier to Commercial Men

The premier made a notable speech last week in board the magnificent new Dominion line ship, Canada, in Montreal harbor. He and a number of other public men were entertained at a lunch, and Mr. Laurier afterwards on the school question went into an able resume of the trade and commerce of Canada.

In the course of his remarks he said that the principles and the part of reform were not those of revolution. They had other interests to serve and he now expressed his own feelings as well as those of the commercial men of Montreal when he said they were above all things a nation of farmers and the interests and welfare were the interests of all.

"He continued: We have fisheries not approached in any part of the world. We have forests not surpassed elsewhere, and mines which have not yet given the whole of what is expected of them, but we may fairly expect that they will, not only eclipse, rival California and Australia. But if I am to speak my own mind the farmer is the chief of all, the man who tills the mother Earth, always old but still young, and who never fails to respond to our appeals. Unfortunately, the condition of the farmer for fifteen or twenty years has not been as brilliant or prosperous as we might have expected. After the Napoleonic wars the fortunes of the English farmer improved greatly, and after the introduction of free trade this much may be said of the English that her fortunes rose in a manner unexampled in the history of the world. (Cheers.) The Canadian farmers were especially situated to take advantage of this. The time came when the produce of England was insufficient to feed her people, and they had to look abroad, so that fifty years or so the Canadian farmer had almost a monopoly of the British market, but for the last twenty years the conditions have been changed. The farmer on this side has no longer the monopoly of the English market, but has to compete with Argentina, Russia, and even India as well, and while his competitors are on the sea-shore, his fields are thousands of miles from it.

He then discussed the most important problem of cheap transportation, and said his government were in anxious for an improved Atlantic service than a passenger one, though not opposed to this last. He claimed the St. Lawrence route should be the most popular, for "everybody who knows the geography of this country knows that by natural laws the St. Lawrence route was intended by the hand of God himself to be the great artery on the continent of North America."

"The deepening of the canals is another object which I would impress on you as being the wish of the government to achieve. It has been proved that by the deepening of the canals the trade of Canada and the west as well will come this way. The moment the St. Lawrence canals have been deepened, all the products of the great western states beyond the Mississippi must come to the seashore by way of the St. Lawrence. (Cheers.) We will endeavor, whether our administration be long or short, to show that these ideas are carried to a practical issue. We do not claim any paternity for these ideas for they were the ideas of two fathers of Montreal, the Hon. John Young and Sir Hugh Allan." (Cheers.)

Mr. Laurier concluded amid a scene of immense enthusiasm, with a reference to the desirability of erecting statues to the late Sir Hugh Allan and the late Hon. John Young.

The fair was well attended by people and cattle, but money was scarce and consequently very few cattle changed hands.

The funeral took place Monday forenoon to the Durham Cemetery.
