Strange to Say, Deaths by Accident Are the Most Easy-Lockjaw or Tetanus Cause Intense Agony up to the Time of Beath-In the Majority of Beaths the End is Painless.

The most painful forms of death are curiously enough, not those that are most shocking or most commonly dreaded. The most distressing accidents, usually produce painless deaths, while some familiar and little feared diseases result in intensely agonizing death. The machinery and the rush and hurry of city life cause more shocking forms of death than the tortures of the Inquisition.

The question as to what are the most painful and easiest deaths to die, must, of course, be deeply interesting to everysaid the merchant, "there is one. Dr. A. P. Smith, a surgeon of wide
