Story of His Many Adventures-Sailed Over Unknown Seas in Charge of a Big Flotilla When Twenty Years Old -Honored By His King and Country.

Four hundred years ago on the 24th of June next the foot of civilized man was first set on the American continent. Sebastian Cabot is entitled to the credit of finding the mainland, and, as he was an Englishman, his native country can to some degree divide the honors of discovery with Spain.

Sebastian Cabot was born at Bristol, the son of John Cabot, a Venetian merchant, dwelling in that city either in 1476 or 1477, and was a traveller from a very early age. When he was two or three years old he was taken by the merchant-adventurer, his father, on a difficult and perlious voyage to Venice. While he was still a mere boy he was fired by the first and second voyages of Columbus, which excited the whole world of that day. The youth, possessed of wealth, seamanship and enthusiasm, beseiged the court of his King, Henry

VII., to authorize an expedition of discovery! Despite his youth, his many advantages caused Sebastian to be GIVEN A CHANCE.

Early in the following year five ships set sail from Bristol. The navigator who was directing this enterprise was at this time only twenty or twenty-one years of age. He was in sole command in the ship Matthew, of 200 tons. An attempt has been made of late years to show that his father, John Cabot, accompanied the expedition, and was entitled to much of the credit. But the old and accepted versions of the time do not mention John Cabot except as Sebastian's father, and give the youth
