Synopsis

Winston Smog, a filthy rich Englishman, would like more than anything else, to belong to the Royal Reform Club, a rather ridiculously exclusive English Club. Smog, accompanied by his valet, Rupert Smedley, embarks on a treasure hunt which serves as the initiation for this club. Smog and Smedley must visit six countries and collect various groups and objects within a fortnight. Smog is rather optimistic as he leaves and hopes to rise above the failures of his forefathers in this magnificent endeavour.

In France they run into quite a stumbling-block, in the form of Madame Fifi, who, mistaking Smedley for Smog, chases both of them around the world.

At the end of Act I, Smog and Smedley find themselves thoroughly lost and it is only through the efficient services of a Chinese laundry that they arrive in the country of their next assignment.

In Waterloo, they become involved in a crisis at the men's residence, and a very presumptuous ticket agent at Malton makes the deadline even more pressing.

Suspense runs high in the final scene as zero hour arrives. Madame Fifi appears showing the effects of her trip and the Royal Reform Club enters a new age as the Reformed Reform Club.
