Summer session features buffet
as WLU students begin studies

Most people are vacationing at this time of year but for some it's back to the books. Summer session begins July 3 at Wilfrid Laurier University.

The university will be holding classes for about 1,400 students in Orillia, Brampton, Barrie, and for the first time in Port McNicoll. Day as well as evening classes are available at most centres.

At the Waterloo campus an outdoor buffet is planned for July 5 for summer session students, faculty and staff. The buffet is an enjoyable way for students and professors to get acquainted.

This year the buffet will feature hamburger, Oktoberfest sausage with sauerkraut on a bun, a number of salads and a relish tray. Watermelon and butter tarts will be served for dessert.

Those attending summer session include business people, housewives, teachers, regular WLU students, transfer students from other universities, grade 12 (year 4) students getting a head start on a university career, and others. Students can take one or two credit courses toward a degree during the summer. Classes end Aug. 11.
