WLU photographer wins award
in North American competition

James Hertel, Wilfrid Laurier University's staff photographer, came up a winner again at this year's annual meeting of the University Photographers Association of America.

He was awarded the prize for a selection of three prints entered in judging at the meeting held at Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa.

Hertel joined the association in 1979 and has won honors at each annual meeting of the professional association since. He was named to the top honor as Photographer of the Year in 1981 and was named a director of the association the next year.

Since joining the association Hertel won three awards for prints and two publication awards.

In his duties at Laurier Hertel takes all photos used in campus publications and posters. He also takes all news photographs for the information office.
