WLU marks national universities

week with open house Oct. 2

Wilfrid Laurier University will mark National Universities Week with an open house on the first day of this special week, Oct 2, from 1 p.m. to 4p.m.

Invited are all residents of Kitchener-Waterloo and area, especially parents of high school students who may soon be attending university. In addition, President John A. Weir has sent invitations to parents of all first-year students.

Many departments and faculties of the university will have special demonstrations and displays. And there will be a musical event and three films about the university shown throughout the afternoon.

Visitors may bring water samples from home and have the efficiency of their water softeners determined by the Laurier chemistry department.

The biology department will hold a house plant clinic, and also give visitors an opportunity to see the electric catfish, the cruising guppies and wonderful walking catfish.

There will be much more to see and do, including special presentations by a number of arts departments, the social work faculty and the school of business and economics.
