Laurier student chosen for Zimbabwe seminar

J. David Black, a fourth-year English and anthropology student at Wilfrid Laurier University, is one of 30 Canadians-- and the only one from the Twin Cities-- to attend a seminar this summer in Zimbabwe. More than 140 students had applied from across Canada for the six-week seminar.

He will be attending the World University Service of Canada (WUSC) annual seminar, held in a different country each year.

While in the African country, Black will participate in development projects, research, university liaison with Zimbabwe students, plus cultural events and leisure activities.
