war. It's a pity too, because it could so easily have kept out of it and might probably have been in position to exercise a beneficent influence over the terms of peace. The world is in a desperately bad state and I doubt if we will ever again see it free from war or as relatively free as it was before this great outbreak. But the world probably needs the chastening, and the Lord God omnipotent who reigneth over the nations knows how to bring good out of evil and has His own wise purposes to accomplish in this general upheaval of human society and conflict among the nations of the earth.

It seems strange to read in your letter about gardening already. We still have three or four feet of snow and I haven't given the subject any serious thought yet. Your hens are laying well. Ours are not doing much yet, but we get at least one egg every day, and that's about 5 cents worth. To-morrow night I will have my second Lenten Service. But I must bring my rambling remarks to a close. With love, I am

Most sincerely yours,
