She said "1970 starts a new decade and will be remembered by many different people for many different reasons. For us who are here today, signifying our interest in this learning centre, 1970 will be remembered as the year that Willison Hall, the original building of Waterloo College, was demolished. ^{since our last} It ^{meeting} had provided a familiar landmark on Albert Street for almost 60 years". She said ^(in 1969) that her four years as president were made easier because of the support of her Executive and University personnel, as well as members of the Auxiliary. Mrs. Hachborn paid tribute to the late Dr. U. S. Leupold who had shown great interest and given assistance to the Women's Auxiliary over the years.
