Dear Mother -

Please accept thanks for the books, the "Ante-Meine Fathers", which reached me O.K. last week. I succeeded in getting them through free of duty, and the only cost to me was the express, which amounted to $2.43. The books are in fine condition and I appreciate them very much. It would have been impossible to get them, even second hand for less than $50, and that I could never have afforded. I may sometime want the Meine and the Post Meine Fathers, though as far as I know they are not now on the Chicago Seminary course, while those that you sent are. The possession of the books you sent will not only profit me personally but will also enable me to repay to some extent Prof. Zinck from whom I have borrowed many books. I would have been much further along with the course than I am if I had been able to buy the books required. I had to use such books as I could lay my hands on, and those were not very many until I began to borrow from Prof. Zinck. As he has no family he has been able to buy the books as needed and consequently is much nearer the completion of the course than I am. I hope, however, to have it more than half done by vacation time next summer. I had a nice letter from Billie some time ago in which he said I ought to plan on coming over on a vacation
