and stayed till after 10 o'clock. Mrs. Maurer has had her lower teeth out and hasn't got her new set yet, so she was a little under the weather or 'down in the lip,' so to speak. Winter is approaching quite rapidly, when we will have another breathing spell of 8 or 10 days before entering upon the final home-stretch. The boys in the Colley School held their preliminary Oratorical Contest last week. Cornelius and Herman both had speeches, but did not make the team. They served one good purpose, however, in that they eliminated me from a voice as judge in the contest for which I am more or less devoutly thankful. Ellen in addition to the three is studying Geography in the public school. She takes her work quite seriously and is getting along well. She writes as well as some of the older ones with pen and ink. Catharine knows the first two Commandments and says them every day. She can also dress and undress herself as well as any of them. But I must close for this time. With lots of love and all good wishes, I am

Yours sincerely yours,
