WATERLOO

ONTARIO

our frosts had extended so far south and had played such havoc with your fruit prospects. We had it very cold at the same time, but it did no damage as nothing was far enough advanced here to be hurt. We had it fairly cold right along; in fact to-day was the first day on which we had no furnace fire. I have enough coal in the cellar for two weeks yet, and I hope I will not have to buy any more. We had five dozen coloured eggs for the children for Easter this morning, and I don't think there are five eggs left to-night. They - at least the smaller ones - were up about 5 or 6 o'clock this morning hunting for their eggs, and seemed to enjoy it quite as much as at Christmas. Marion took her first communion to-night. Little Florence sits alone now and is practicing on the consonant sounds now, saying "dā, dā" and the like. She is such a sweet little thing that every body loves her and the whole family is devoted to her. The only thing she is slow about is cutting her teeth. Some of them look as though they might come through any time now, but they have not as yet appeared. Well, I must say good night and bring my letter to a close. With much love and all kind of good wishes, I am

Most sincerely yours,

Conrad Little.
