PASSING OF MRS. ORSON SMITH

Mrs. Orson Smith, wife of the past president and present chairman of the board of directors of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company bank, died suddenly Tuesday afternoon at French Lick Springs, Ind.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith belonged to pioneer families of Chicago, the elder Smith settling there in 1838. The family homestead, later, was known as 181 Wabash avenue. At that time there was no obstruction between the aristocratic avenue and the lake's blue water, Michigan avenue being but a stretch of white sand, later, by piling and accretion, developing into the present thoroughfare.

On the corner, to the south of the Smith home, was the residence of John B. Rice, one time mayor of Chicago. In this vicinity began the courtship which culminated in the marriage of Orson Smith and Anna Rice. Mr. John Orson Barber, of Winnetka, son of Mr. Smith's sister, was born in the old Smith homestead, and then Potter Palmer purchased it as the site of the Wabash avenue portion of his hotel. The Rice corner, with the store and office building subsequently erected, remained in the possession of Mrs. Smith and her sisters.

No woman was more widely known in the highest social circles and philanthropies than Mrs. Smith. Probably no philanthropic movement of any magnitude was ever launched that did not include her as a contributing patron or officer. St. Luke's, the County hospital, Maurice Porter hospital and many others will miss her cooperation keenly.

In the early '80's, Mrs. Smith was one of the founders of the Illinois Training School for Nurses, of which Mrs. Ira Couch Wood is president. Mrs. Smith was the treasurer for the several years preceding her death. Mrs. Henry Reilly, Winnetka, was a niece of Mrs. Smith. Another niece was married to Bertram Winston, brother of Mrs. Victor Elting.

How To Buy a Motor Car

PPRICE does not determine what you get—satisfaction or disappointment. What does?

The ability to distinguish what is what between cars.

What does the average buyer know of the relative value of metals, mechanical features, etc.? Many good mechanical engineers have accepted ideas and principles as being (in their judgment) good, and have found later from actual experience that they were wrong.

How, then, is the layman to buy intelligently? By investigating worth to determine value.

Why do you look into a man's past history before hiring him? To determine whether or not his record—what he is and what he has done—supports your judgment of his worth—what he can be depended upon to do. Man, horse, motor car, and what not has a history and if you want to KNOW you look up their records. History repeats itself.

A good motor car is not a chance happening—it is the result of knowledge of mechanics and metals combined with an understanding of the conditions which the builder must meet, and what and how results can be obtained.

A successful car means a car with the weaknesses left out,—each part so constructed in design, material and workmanship, that it is in itself capable of performing its duty under all conditions with certainty and ease.

The several parts in its make-up must constitute a homogeneous unit.

A few strong features do not make a satisfactory car. One weak feature can make a car unsatisfactory. It is the wise maker who proves thoroughly the worth of each feature before incorporating it in the car offered to the public.

This has been the Haynes idea since its inception—twenty-four years ago. No fads or freakishness. No revolutionary changes. Just consistent, persistent and insistent improvement throughout.

The Haynes of years ago is a modern car today. The Haynes of today will be a modern car for years to come—a composite of motor car ideals that spells permanent satisfaction.

We can see no good reason why you should not choose a
