

NEGRO EDUCATOR TO TELL OF PROGRESS

Hampton Institute Head Will Talk At Winnetka Sunday Evening.

DISCUSS RACE PROBLEMS

Lecture to be Illustrated by Motion Pictures and Enlivened With Typical Plantation Melodies.

Problems arising from the influx of negroes from the south to Chicago and environs and the best means of solving them will be discussed Sunday evening before the Sunday Evening club in Winnetka Community House. Those in charge today declare that new phases of industrial and social life arising from the increase in the number of negroes would distinguish the program.

How the race problems of the south and virtually of the north practically had been solved by Hampton (Virginia) Institute, pioneer vocational school of the United States, will be described by Dr. Hollis Burke Frissell, principal of the institution, and illustrated by motion pictures. A feature of the program will be plantation melodies by the famous Hampton quartet, two of whom have appeared, it is said, before the public the last 30 years.

With the co-operation of the Greater Hampton Patriotic Movement, which for several weeks has presented Hampton's aims and achievements to thousands in Chicago and suburbs, its accomplishments and methods will be emphasized before the Sunday Evening club. Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the University of Chicago, is chairman of the advisory committee of the Greater Hampton Patriotic Movement, which includes L. Wilbur Messer, general chairman of the Young Men's Christian Association, Charles L. Hutchinson, vice-president of the Corn Exchange National bank (Chicago) and A. Rosecrans Baldwin of Chicago. Former President William H. Taft is chairman of the board of trustees of Hampton.

According to leaders of the Greater Hampton Patriotic Movement it is "a widespread endeavor for national efficiency and production" particularly among the 12,000,000 negroes in the United States. "Its specific purpose is to increase and mobilize national resources of negroes and Indians (Hampton also teaches the aborigines) in industry, particularly in agriculture, home economics, health, housing, child welfare and gardening.

"Through manifold activities, especially in the south, this movement is shaping the welfare of hundreds of thousands of negroes whose value to the country under such influence and leadership as Hampton affords can scarcely be over estimated."

Among the expressed aims of the movement are increase of acreage under cultivation and the rotation of crops, increase in the production of poultry and cattle, expansion of dairying and a general elevation of standards in rural and other communities.

"In several ways but especially because of its intensive and extensive system of instruction, Hampton is influencing rural and urban education among negroes all over the United States." In these days of war the extension of instruction in cooking, canning, glazing, gardening, animal husbandry, tinning, sewing, hygiene, sanitation and in the humanities is Hampton's purpose.

The slogan of the movement is "plant every piece of ground this year. Make two bushels of potatoes grow where one grew before. Teach a dollar to do the work of two." Telegraphic information from Hampton, Va., received today is that Hampton Institute, by its board of trustees, has dedicated the institution and its 1,000 pupils to the service of the nation.

Religious, educational, social, philanthropic, industrial and political organization of men and women in these parts have been informed by means of wide publicity, encompassed in what was termed "Hampton Week," of the practical patriotism to which Hampton has addressed itself. The 75,000 negroes in Chicago and Cook county have been enlisted in the movement and have been brought within the educational and moral influence of Hampton.

Stimulus was given and now is evident, it is declared, in the formation of garden, calf and pig clubs.

Graduates of Hampton—organized in Chicago and elsewhere as the Armstrong League in honor of the founder of Hampton, General Chapman Armstrong—have led in giving instruction in domestic economy and the trades. Housewives now are being told to save that which before they wasted in preparing meals. Scraps of meats, fruits, vegetables and other edibles which formerly were disdained now are conserved. Similar instruction in efficiency and conservation is given in the vocations and all the efforts of the Hampton Movement are directed toward intensity and practicality as an expression of patriotism.

Spurred by the Hampton Movement officials of Chicago and those of its suburbs together with those of industrial corporations have surveyed the negro and his conditions since the migration from the south. The negro's value in industry, his loyalty, stability and ability have been recorded and it is these records which will be presented in diverse form to the Sunday Evening club.
