New Draft Rulings.

It became increasingly evident this week that the government is influenced by only one consideration in applying the selective service law-raising of an army.

Religious Objectors.

General Crowder's ruling on the conscientious objectors means that members of sects and individuals who claim their beliefs do not permit them to engage in war or killing, will be compelled to render service to the nation, if exempted on no other grounds.

They will be drafted, credited to their states' quotas and localities, sent to the cantonments and assigned to the huge body of men who, in modern warfare, never enter actual combat.
