Consolidation of Suffrage Bodies

An endeavor is being made to unite the separate suffrage organizations of the communities along the North Shore with the Evanston organization in order that more constructive work may be done by the larger body than is possible by the several smaller bodies, and that these small organizations may thus be made eligible to affiliation with the national organization, a relationship which is limited to groups numbering at least five hundred.

There may have been a time for individual work with suffrage groups but now, when the very best efforts of all who stand for the enfranchisement of women, is essential to turn all the work that has been done into achievement through the federal amendment, co-ordination of endeavor and unity of action are more than ordinarily important.

Woman's day is about to dawn and the women who have seen the promise through all the years of the past when the great majority of women seemed to be entirely content with a secondary place in the social order should now exert every effort to bring that dawn gloriously, industrially, economically, socially and politically. The women's cause in every way is bound up in the suffrage cause and all women who are working for the advancement of their sex should be working together.

The groups in the North Shore towns have a certain quality which they can give to the Evanston group and the women who have worked under the Evanston banner have a history for achievement and an inspiration for work which will be of immense advantage for our own women. It is high time that the two sets of earnest women, seeking the same thing, should begin to work with a common method, as they now work with a common purpose.

How Much For The Red Cross?

The Red Cross campaign is in full swing in Wilmette as elsewhere in the United States. The Red Cross, that common meeting ground of all nations, all sects and races, must have money to carry forward the great work of healing the wounds that this bitter war inflicts.

The American people, every nation that is in this war, have heard repeated calls for money. There is the war tax that greets us in almost every operation of our daily lives. There is the income tax and the excess profit tax, the demand upon the unfortunate to contribute to the safety of the institutions which have made their fortune possible. There are the many requests for aid to this and that relief work, but there is none to be compared with the Red Cross in importance and appeal.

To the men who have gone into service, to the saddened people of the devastated districts, to the sick and wounded, the Red Cross stands as the emblem of mercy and pity and help. And it is the dollars of the people of the nations at war which keep that cross hovering over the scene of fearful carnage and destruction. It is your dollars that remind the men in their hours of distress that there is thought being taken for them, for their safety and comfort by the people at home, for whom they are facing or making the supreme sacrifice. You would not wish to be found lacking in that line of helpers of the defenders of our faith and our homes and honor.

The time has passed for arguments as to the reason for giving to the Red Cross. There is none of a spark of intelligence who can claim ignorance of the meaning of the Red Cross to the men who are fighting the war. It is only those who will not see who do not realize the supreme importance of this organization which brings a little order out of the chaos that is Europe today. You know, everybody knows, that it is the duty of every person to give to the fund which is to stand between our men and needless suffering, perhaps death.

How much you are to give you must decide, not how much you can give without feeling it, but how much you can contribute without imperiling those dependent upon you or those to whom you are under financial obligation. The utmost that you can spare is none too much to give to the Red Cross. You alone know how much that is and you must determine the amount. But do it, resolved that you will err on the side of too much, if you err at all.

FRENCH MARKET

small aluminum utensils dangling from the parasols made a queer picture.

Mrs. Horace Kent Tenny, Miss Louise Kellogg, Miss Alice DeWindt, Mrs. Heylinger, DeWindt, Mrs. Howard N. Elmer and Mrs. Goddard F. Cheney, in charming garden frocks, sold geraniums, tulips and other growing plants. Mrs. Douglas Smith, Mrs. Robert H. Ripley, Miss Marcella Mettler and Mrs. Herbert N. Anning, sold vegetables. Gardeners from some of the most beautiful estates along the north shore were present to instruct ambitious war gardeners in the mysteries of raising potatoes, corn, beans and other garden products.

The New Trier table, in charge of Miss Olive Grove and Miss Katherine Murphy, contained many fancy hand-painted garden hats, hand painted garden sticks, and other fascinating ornaments.

To the jingly tunes of a hurdy gurdy couples danced in the street, and every one entered into the holiday atmosphere and helped swell the Dr. Alice Barlow-Brown fund for Belgian and French refugees and wounded. Mrs. Charles W. Hubbard's little twin son, dressed as a little French refugee in ragged black smock and torn stockings, presented a pitiful and bedraggled appearance that urged many a person to dig deeper into his pocket for the benefit of the children of Belgium and France.

Your Ration

Can you make this your honor ration until the Food Administration asks you to change it?

- Meat, 1 1/4 pounds per week.
- Fat, 1 pound per week.
- Sugar, 3/4 pound per week.
- Wheat, as little as possible. Will you try it?

Beware of Adjectives.

Many of us are victims of the adjective habit. Like all habits, it grows and grows and leaves its votaries more helpless than before. "Beget all with a temperance," said the great poet. And before him there was another who said: "Let your communication be yea, yea; nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."—Toledo Blade.
